

Districts*Name: 18th Street Residential Historic District*Description:

The 18th Street Residential Historic District is located primarily along 18th Street, between 3rd Avenue (a few of the buildings are located on 3rd) and Arlington Avenue, in the Arlington Heights neighborhood of Los Angeles. The district almost exclusively consists of one- and two-story single-family residences. The district is sited on a slight plateau with a northern view of the Santa Monica Mountains. Streets follow a rectilinear grid pattern. Lots are generally modest and consistent in size, and properties have uniform setbacks with lawns fronted by concrete walkways. Most retain concrete driveways with curb cuts and detached rear garages.

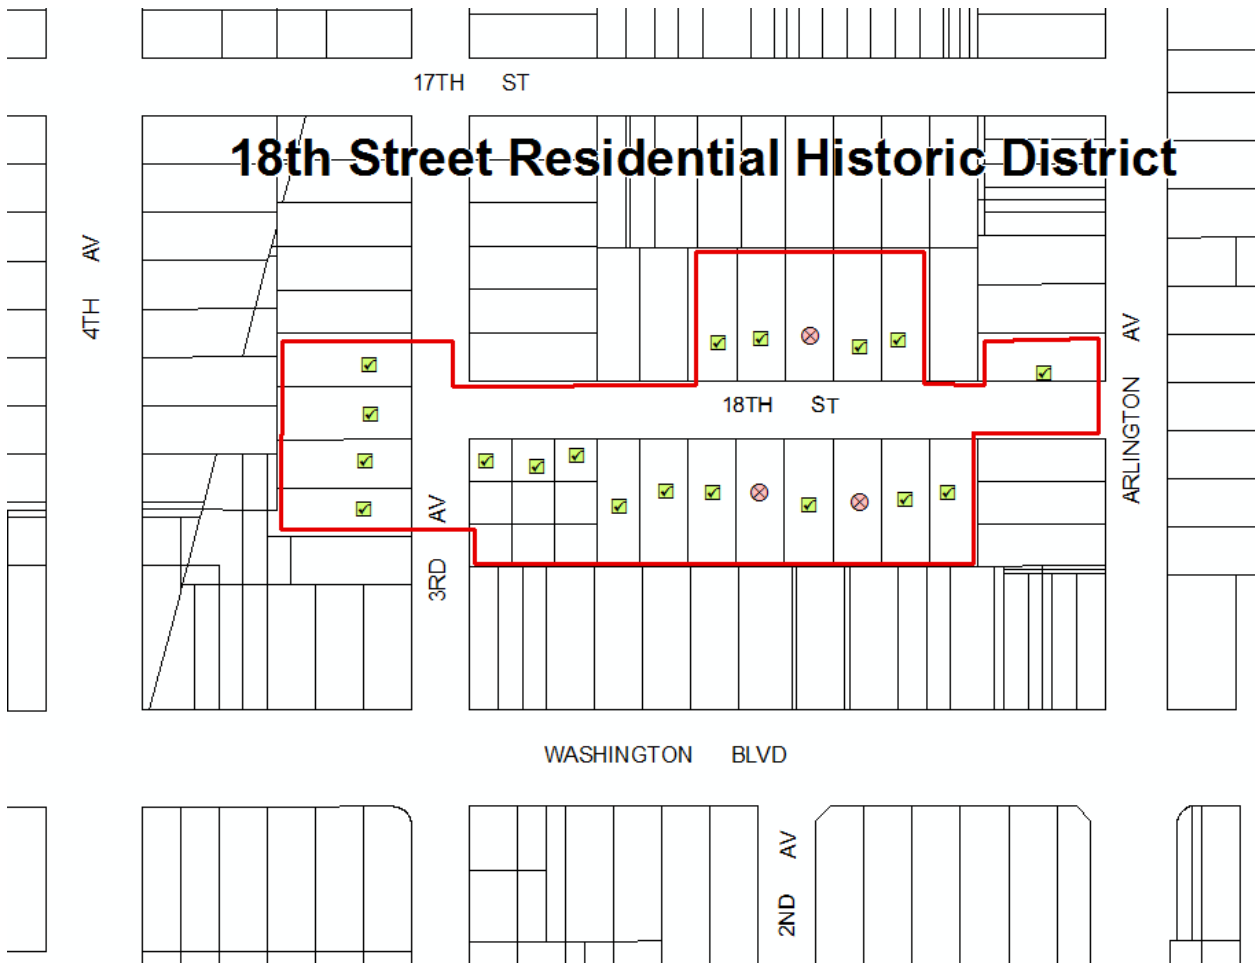

Most residences were designed in the Craftsman style; one residence is American Foursquare in style, and one is a Mid-Century Modern-style apartment building. Typical features include gabled roofs with wide eaves and dormers, partial or full-width porches, and clapboard siding. Of the 20 total properties, 17 are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

The 18th Street Residential Historic District retains a notable concentration of early Arts and Crafts residences, dating from the first two decades of the 20th century. Buildings within the district retain their original plans, massing, scale, and character-defining features, mostly of the Craftsman style. The district is also an excellent example of a single-family residential area developed specifically due to its proximity to the former Ocean Park (along 16th Street; now Venice Boulevard), Pico Heights (along Pico Boulevard), and Washington Boulevard streetcar lines.

The historic district is part of the larger Arlington Heights tract, bounded by Arlington Avenue, 6th Street, Pico Boulevard, and Adams Boulevard. Located on a plateau, advertisements for Arlington Heights highlighted its commanding views of Hollywood and the mountains, sheltered from the noise and bustle of the city. Though subdivided by 1887, in conjunction with the establishment of the Pico Heights streetcar line, development of the tract did not begin in earnest until the early 1900s; most houses constructed in the historic district date to the 1900s and early 1910s.

The period of significance is 1903 to 1915, reflecting the time period during which the majority of the properties within the district were constructed. Of the district's 20 properties, 85% contribute to its significance.

Name: 54th and Crenshaw Streetcar Commercial Historic District*Description:

The 54th and Crenshaw Streetcar Commercial Historic District is located at the intersection of 54th Street and Crenshaw Boulevard, in the Hyde Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. Fifteen commercial properties on the east side of Crenshaw Boulevard and the north side of 54th Street comprise the district. Buildings primarily date between 1925 and 1938 (there is some infill from the 1960s). The topography of the area is generally flat, and streets follow a rectilinear grid pattern. One- and two-story retail storefronts and mixed-use commercial properties (with residential accommodations at the second story) comprise the district. Consistent with commercial development accommodating the streetcar, contributing buildings are built out to the sidewalk. Buildings on Crenshaw are fronted by a narrow vehicular service road that separates parking accommodation from the Crenshaw corridor.

Contributing properties feature storefronts with large display windows and stucco cladding; a few have canted bays. Architectural styles represented within the district include Spanish Colonial Revival, Mediterranean Revival, French Revival, and Art Deco. A number of buildings are vernacular in style. Of the 15 buildings within the district, 11 contribute to the district's significance. Non-contributors are either vacant lots or are constructed outside the period of significance.

Significance:

The 54th and Crenshaw Streetcar Commercial Historic District is significant as a rare and intact example of a 1920s and '30s commercial historic district associated with the location and service of historic streetcar lines in Los Angeles. The district is located at the nexus of two former streetcar lines: Line M (later Line 8), serving 54th Street, and Line E that ran along Crenshaw Boulevard. Line M began service to 54th Street in April of 1912. It ran to downtown via South Broadway and Main Streets. The terminus of Line M was at 54th and Crenshaw Boulevard. Line E, the longest of the Los Angeles Railway streetcar lines, was originally built by the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway in 1902 and stretched from Colorado Boulevard in Eagle Rock to El Segundo Boulevard in Hawthorne.

The commercial district at the intersection of Crenshaw and 54th Street was developed to serve the surrounding Angeles Mesa subdivision. Although the first wave of residential sales in the area began with the extension of Line M in 1912, the majority of adjacent residential development dates from the boom of the 1920s. By the late 1920s, most residential properties north and south of 54th Street as well as east and west of Crenshaw Boulevard had been constructed, prompting the increased construction of commercial properties along the Crenshaw and 54th.

The period of significance for the historic district is 1925 to 1938, which is the period during which the majority of buildings in the district were constructed. Of the 15 buildings in the district, 73% are contributors. There are a few buildings constructed outside the period of significance within the historic district boundaries. The infill that occurred in the 1960s to the present, in addition to storefront alterations, has compromised the overall integrity of the historic district in such a way that it may not retain sufficient integrity for National Register eligibility.

| Reason:        | Rare intact example of a 1920s to 1930s commercial historic district associated with historic streetcar lines along 54th Street and Crenshaw Boulevard. Most examples of streetcar commercial districts from this time period no longer retain integrity. Due to storefront alterations and some infill starting in the 1960s, the historic district may not retain sufficient integrity to be eligible for listing in the National Register. |

Name: Adams Boulevard Courtyard Apartments Historic District*Description:

The Adams Boulevard Courtyard Apartments Historic District is sited on the south side of Adams Boulevard, between 7th Avenue and Edgehill Drive, in the Jefferson Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. The topography of the district is relatively flat, and Adams Boulevard follows a rectilinear grid pattern. The district consists of seven L-shaped apartment buildings facing a central courtyard with mature landscaping (one build has its own side landscaped court). Buildings are set back and raised from street level, and are fronted by lawn, mature shade trees and a concrete sidewalk. Detached garages are located at the rear of the properties and are accessed via an alley.

The apartments were designed in the Minimal Traditional style with Colonial Revival and Streamline Moderne design elements; distinctive features include rounded corners and broken pediments over the unit entry doors. Some apartments have bay windows on the first and/or second floor levels. All the courtyard apartment buildings are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

The Adams Boulevard Courtyard Apartments Historic District is significant as an excellent concentration of intact courtyard apartment buildings exemplary of multi-family residential development in the late 1930s and early 1940s. Each courtyard apartment retains distinctive features of the property type, including inward-facing units, mature landscaping, shared concrete walkways and detached rear garages. Buildings were designed in the Minimal Traditional style with elements of the Streamline Moderne and American Colonial Revival styles.

The period of significance is 1940-1944, which is the period all seven buildings were constructed. Of the seven total buildings within the historic district, 100% contribute to the district's significance.

Name: Arlington Heights Streetcar Residential Historic District*Description:

The Arlington Heights Streetcar Residential Historic District consists of single- and multi-family residences on 3rd Avenue and 15th Street, just south of Pico Boulevard, in the Arlington Heights neighborhood of Los Angeles. The district is sited on a slight plateau with a northern view of the Santa Monica Mountains. Streets follow a rectilinear grid pattern. Single-family properties comprising the district have uniform setbacks and front lawns. The fourplexes and apartment houses were built to maximize lot coverage. Many properties have detached rear garages, and additional residences have been added at the rear of several lots.

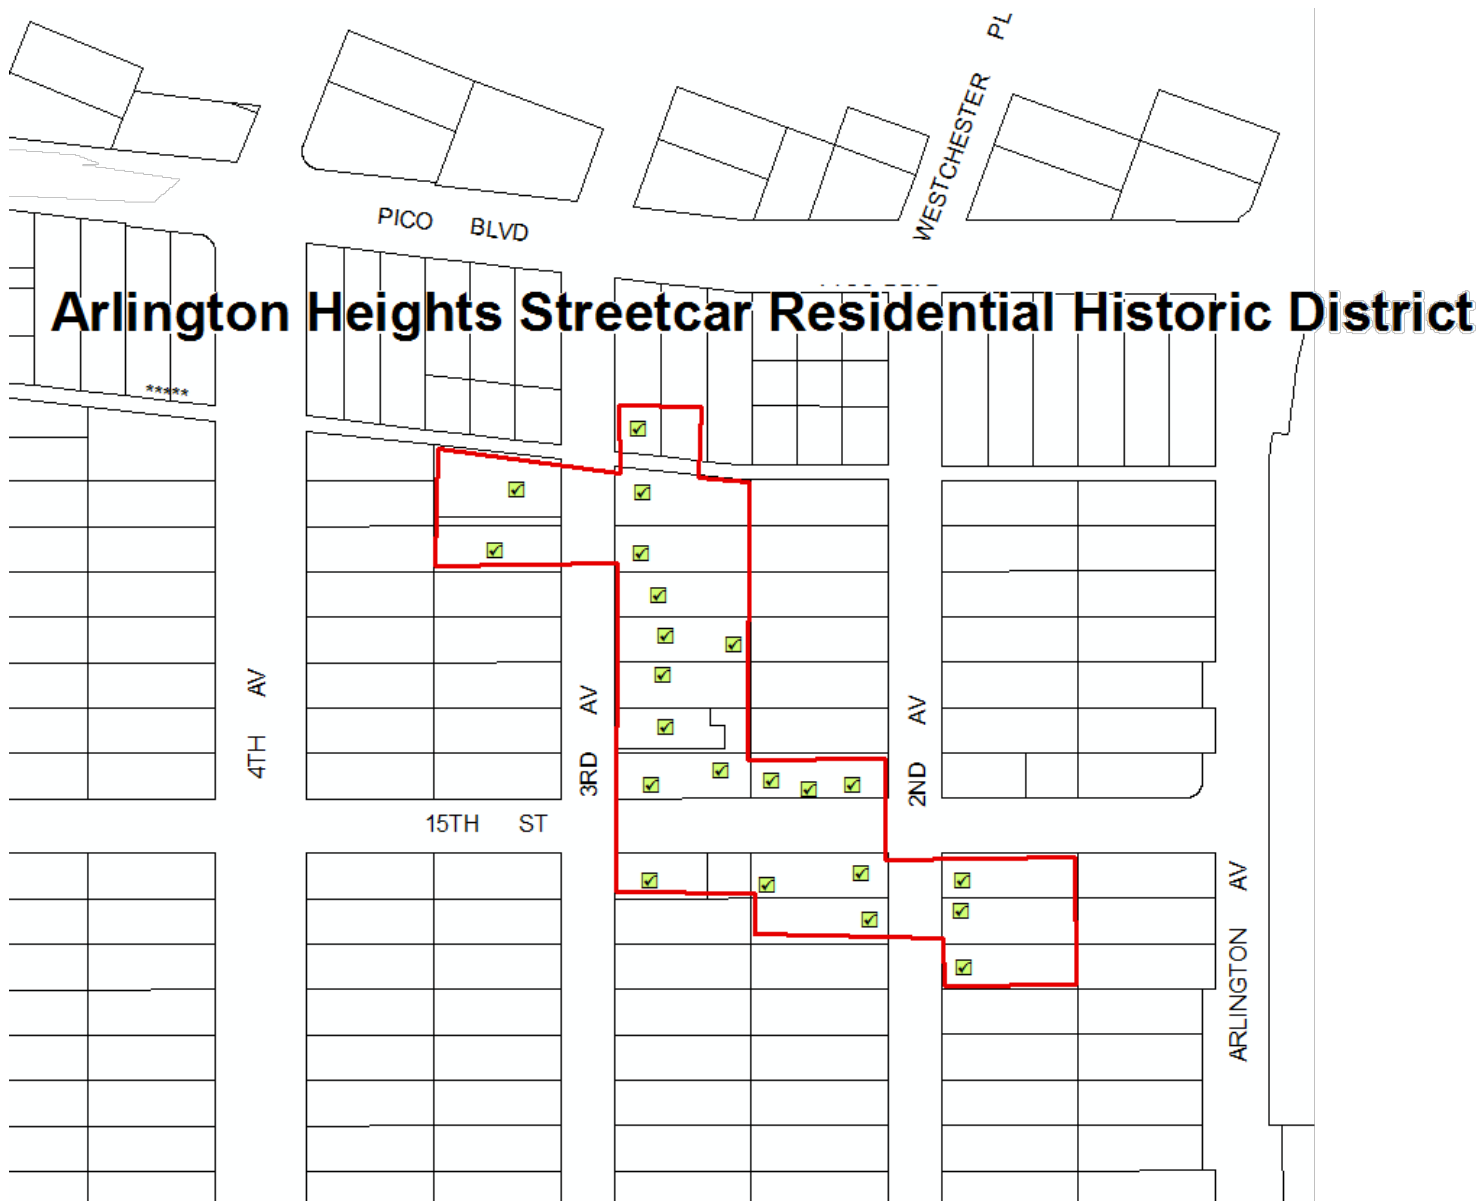

All properties are one or two stories in height. Earlier dwellings are transitional in style, with some exhibiting design elements characteristic of both the Victorian and Arts and Crafts modes of architecture. Those from the 1910s are generally Craftsman in style, featuring wood clapboard siding, partial or full-width porches, and overhanging eaves. There are 22 buildings in the historic district; all are contributors.

Significance:

The Arlington Heights Streetcar Residential Historic District is significant as a residential streetcar suburb constructed adjacent to the Pico Heights and Ocean Park streetcar lines that ran along Pico Boulevard and 16th Street (now Venice Boulevard), respectively. Primarily composed of small-scale multi-family residences, and single-family residences that were converted for multi-family accommodation, the district reflects the increased pressure for higher density residential development near urban amenities and streetcar connections prior to the widespread availability of the automobile.

The historic district is part of the larger Arlington Heights tract, bounded by Arlington Avenue, 6th Street, Pico Boulevard, and Adams Boulevard. Located on a plateau, advertisements for Arlington Heights highlighted its commanding views of Hollywood and the mountains, sheltered from the noise and bustle of the city. Though subdivided by 1887, in conjunction with the establishment of the Pico Heights streetcar line, development of the tract did not begin in earnest until the early 1900s; most houses constructed in the historic district date from the 1900s and 1910s.

The period of significance for the historic district is 1903 to 1923, reflecting the time period during which all the properties within the district were constructed. Of the district's 22 properties, 100% contribute to its historic significance.

Name: Baldwin Hills Estates Historic District*Description:

The Baldwin Hills Estates Historic District is located in the Baldwin Hills neighborhood in South Los Angeles. The district is bound by Don Tomaso Drive, the hillside east of La Brea Avenue, and an alley behind Don Diablo Drive. The roughly triangular-shaped district sits on a plateau with northerly views of the city. Its curvilinear streets follow the natural topography of the hillside; many culminate in cul-de-sacs. The district consists of mainly one-story single-family residences; however, there are a number of two-story multi-family properties in the southern portion of the district, particularly along Don Tomaso Drive. Lot sizes and shapes vary somewhat with the natural topography of the site. Properties feature fairly uniform, shallow setbacks with front lawns, most of which are terraced and raised from street level. Many residences have an integral garage at the ground floor beneath the single-story living space, taking advantage of sloping lots. Several have swimming pools. The district is further characterized by concrete sidewalks, landscaped parkways, and a relative lack of consistent street trees.

Principal styles within the district include Traditional Ranch, Minimal Ranch, Contemporary Ranch, Oriental Ranch, and American Colonial Ranch. Residences typically feature horizontal massing, a combination of stucco and wood clapboard cladding (sometimes with brick or flagstone), gabled roofs, and composition shingle roofing. Although Ranch is overwhelmingly the predominant style, there are a number of Mid-Century Modern and Hollywood Regency-style residences in the district (most of the multi-family residences are Mid-Century Modern in style). There are 833 buildings within the district, of which 84% are contributors.

Significance:

The Baldwin Hills Estates Historic District is a significant example of a postwar hillside residential subdivision, developed by notable local developer Paul W. Trousdale. The district is also an excellent collection of primarily Ranch-style residences. Contributors retain the essential character-defining features of the Traditional Ranch, Minimal Ranch, Contemporary Ranch, Oriental Ranch, and American Colonial Ranch styles, or the Mid-Century Modern or Hollywood Regency styles.

Development of Baldwin Hills Estates started in 1950 under the sponsorship of the Home Savings and Loan Association. The undeveloped land, previously part of the Elias Jackson "Lucky" Baldwin estate, was acquired by notable developer Paul W. Trousdale. Early advertisements for the subdivision boasted that Baldwin Hills Estates was in proximity to downtown Los Angeles, Hollywood, and Beverly Hills; had wide, winding avenues, underground utilities, and panoramic views; and provided an escape from the smog that plagued the rest of the city. By 1950, approximately 1,030 lots were graded and ready for improvement. A real estate office and large stone pillars (no longer extant) marked the entrance to the development at the intersection of Marlton Avenue and Don Felipe Drive.

The period of significance has been identified as 1955 to 1970, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the district's 833 buildings, 698 contribute to its historic significance (one property could not be evaluated because it is not visible from the public right-of-way).

Name: Baldwin Plaza-Sunset Fields Historic District*Description:

The Baldwin Plaza-Sunset Fields Historic District is located just north and west of the Baldwin Hills neighborhood of South Los Angeles. The district consists of two-story apartment houses roughly bounded by Coliseum Street and Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard to the north, La Brea Avenue to the west, and Santo Tomas Drive, Pinafore Street, Potomac Avenue, Santa Rosalia Drive, and Hillcrest Drive to the south and east. The topography is generally flat. The streets are generally curvilinear and follow the natural topography of the site. Two streets end in cul-de-sacs, and many are only a block long. Lot sizes are fairly uniform, and buildings have shallow uniform setbacks with front lawns. Most properties have detached rear garages that are accessed via alleys. Nicknamed “the Jungle” early on for its lush vegetation, the district’s landscaping is characterized by giant bird of paradise and palm trees, among other subtropical plant species. The district consists of two separately developed tracts; however, the continuity of architecture and landscaping makes it difficult to discern the boundary between the two.

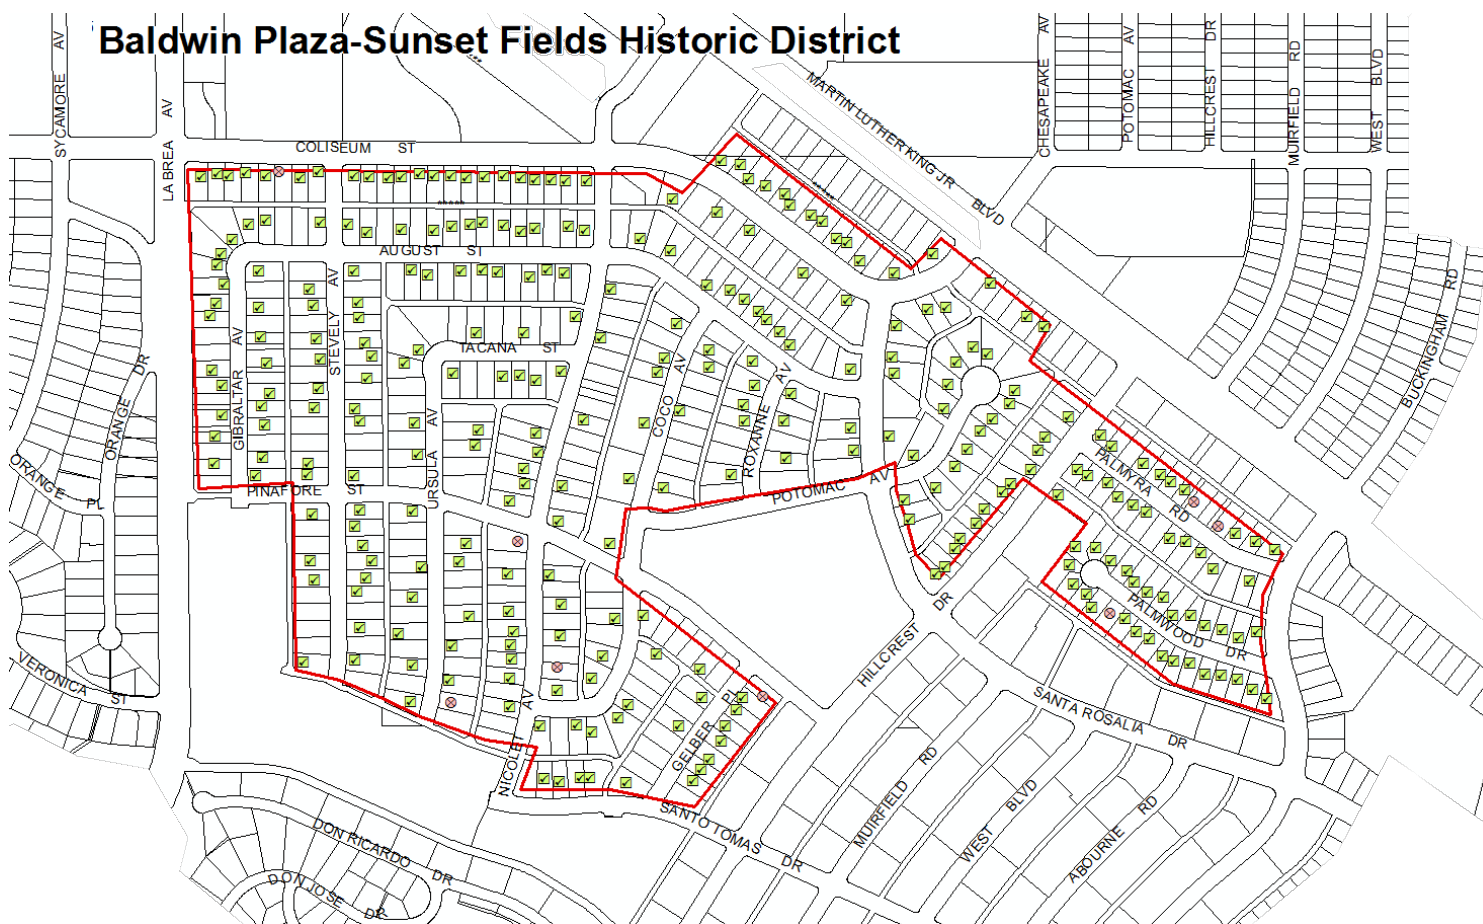

The district is primarily composed of two-story Mid-Century Modern apartment houses, built between 1954 and 1962. Most buildings feature flat roofs, stucco exteriors, and central courtyards. Jalousie windows are common, as are steel casement and aluminum sliding windows. Stone cladding, patterned concrete blocks, and period railings are also common extant architectural details. Many tout tropical names such as ‘The Islander,’ ‘Coco Capri,’ ‘The Tahiti,’ and ‘The Lanai,’ and feature their titles in large script above the entryway in characteristic Mid-Century fonts. Address numbers often join the architectural aesthetic, displayed in oversized digits near front entries. Of the 306 total properties, 301 contribute to the district’s historic significance.

Significance:

The Baldwin Plaza-Sunset Fields Historic District is an excellent example of a 1950s and '60s multi-family residential district, as well as an excellent concentration of Mid-Century Modern residential architecture. Contributors retain their original plans, massing, scale, and character-defining features of the style.

Baldwin Plaza-Sunset Fields is located on land that was previously part of Rancho La Cienega o Paso de la Tijera. The district’s eastern half, from Nicolet Avenue to Hillcrest Drive and Coliseum Street to Santo Tomas Drive, was developed in the mid-1950s by the Prudential Insurance Company. Covering 48 acres and containing 149 lots zoned for apartment buildings, this area was known as Sunset Fields. Subsequent to the Sunset Fields development, an agency headed by E. Bunjes and J. Eubank developed 70 acres on the west side and named the area Baldwin Plaza. This area is bounded by Gibraltar and Nicolet Avenues, Coliseum Street, and Santo Tomas Drive.

From its inception, Baldwin Plaza-Sunset Fields had been home to a notable Jewish population; the 1961 City Directory enumerated a substantial percentage of Jewish tenants living in the district. By 1970, however, many of the Jewish residents had left the neighborhood, presumably moving to communities further westward and into the Valley, where much of the city’s Jewish population resides today. In the 1970s the neighborhood became – and continues to be – a predominantly African American enclave. The period of significance has been identified as 1954 to 1962, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 306 total properties, 98% are contributors to the historic district.

Name: Bronson Avenue Courtyard Apartments Historic District*Description:

The Bronson Avenue Courtyard Apartments Historic District consists of 12 multi-family courtyard apartment buildings in the Mid-City neighborhood of Los Angeles. The district is located on both sides of Bronson Avenue, from Venice Boulevard to just north of 17th Street. It is composed of 12, two-story L-shaped apartment buildings facing a central courtyard and shared walkway. The topography of the district is flat, and Bronson Avenue runs northeast-southwest, perpendicular to Venice Boulevard. Properties retain uniform lot sizes and setbacks fronted by shallow lawns and concrete sidewalks. Detached garages are located at the rear of the properties.

Buildings are constructed in the Minimal Traditional style with American Colonial Revival design features such as quoins, pilasters, pedimented window and door surrounds, and window shutters. Of the 12 total buildings, all are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

The Bronson Avenue Courtyard Apartments Historic District is significant as an excellent concentration of intact courtyard apartment buildings exemplary of multi-family residential development in the mid-1940s. Each courtyard apartment retains distinctive features of the property type, including inward-facing units, L-shaped plans, central landscaping, shared concrete walkways, and detached rear garages. Buildings were designed in the Minimal Traditional style with features of the American Colonial Revival style.

The period of significance has been identified as 1947, which is the year that all of the buildings in the district were constructed. Of the 12 total buildings in the district, 100% contribute to the district's historic significance.

Name: Central Arlington Heights Historic District*Description:

The Central Arlington Heights Historic District is located in the Arlington Heights neighborhood in Los Angeles. The district consists of 22 single- and multi-family residential dwellings located on 6th Avenue between 15th Street and Venice Boulevard. The district is sited on a slight plateau with a northern view of the Santa Monica Mountains, and streets follow a regular, rectilinear grid pattern. Properties in the district have consistent setbacks with shallow front yards and concrete walkways leading from the sidewalk to front porches. All properties have side driveways with curb cuts leading to detached garages.

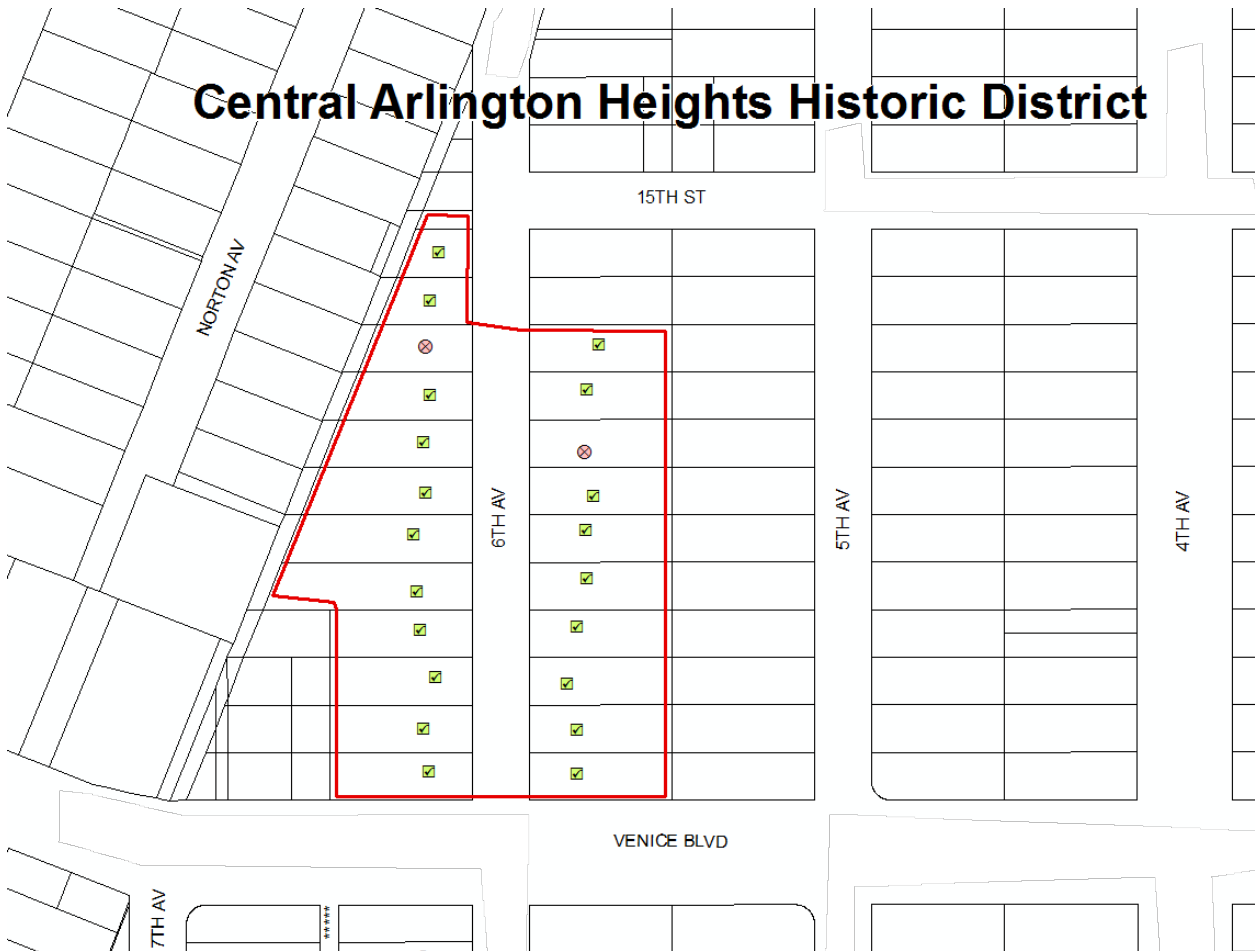

The district is composed of one- and two-story single-family houses, as well as multi-family duplexes, fourplexes, and bungalow courts, primarily designed in the Craftsman, Spanish Colonial Revival, and Mediterranean Revival styles. Craftsman-style residences commonly feature wide front porches, roof brackets, and overhanging eaves. Spanish Colonial Revival and Mediterranean Revival style buildings typically retain clay tile roofing and stucco cladding. Of the 22 total properties, 20 are contributors to the district's historic significance.

Significance:

The Central Arlington Heights Historic District is an excellent example of a residential subdivision that was developed specifically due to its proximity to historic streetcar routes. The district is directly adjacent to the former Pico Heights and Ocean Park streetcar lines that ran along Pico Boulevard and Venice Boulevard, respectively. Central Arlington Heights' properties represent the evolution of residential development in the area from single-family subdivisions to higher density, multi-family neighborhoods due to the increased need for housing near urban amenities and streetcar connections prior to the widespread availability of the automobile.

The historic district is part of the larger Arlington Heights tract, bounded by Arlington Avenue, 6th Street, Pico Boulevard, and Adams Boulevard. Located on a plateau, advertisements for Arlington Heights highlighted its commanding views of Hollywood and the mountains, sheltered from the noise and bustle of the city. Though subdivided by 1887, in conjunction with the establishment of the Pico Heights streetcar line, development of the tract did not begin in earnest until the early 1900s; most houses constructed in the historic district date from the 1900s and 1910s.

The period of significance has been identified as 1905 to 1925, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 22 total properties within the district, 90% are contributors.

Name: Central Arlington Heights South Historic District*Description:

The Central Arlington Heights South Historic District is located in the Arlington Heights neighborhood of Los Angeles. The district is composed of one- and two-story single-family residences, bungalow courts, and fourplexes that run along 5th, 6th, and 7th Avenues between Venice and Washington Boulevards. The district is sited on a slight plateau and has a northward view of the Santa Monica Mountains. Its streetscape exemplifies early 20th century streetcar suburbanization with its uniform blocks of rectilinear parcels laid out in a square grid pattern. Properties have consistent setbacks with shallow front yards and concrete walkways leading from the sidewalk to front porches. There are recently-planted street trees lining the sidewalks of the district.

Styles represented in the district include Craftsman, Spanish Colonial Revival, Mediterranean Revival, and Mission Revival. There are a few Minimal Traditional-style residences as well. Craftsman residences feature wood clapboard siding, partial or full-width front porches, and wide overhanging eaves. Spanish Colonial Revival, Mediterranean Revival, and Mission Revival buildings typically feature stucco cladding and clay tile roofing or clay tile coping. Of the 93 total properties, 73 are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

The Central Arlington Heights South Historic District is an excellent example of a residential subdivision that was developed specifically due to its adjacency to historic streetcar routes. The properties in the district represent the evolution of the streetcar-related residential development from predominantly single-family neighborhoods to higher-density, multi-family neighborhoods with the increased pressure for housing near urban amenities and streetcar connections prior to the widespread availability of the automobile.

The district is in the southern section of the Central Arlington Heights tract, a residential subdivision dating from the 1890s. The historic district was connected to the downtown business district by the Santa Monica (or Ocean Park) streetcar that ran on 16th Street (now Venice Boulevard), as well as the streetcar line along Washington Boulevard. Though subdivided in the 1890s, development of the tract did not begin in earnest until the early 1900s and increased through the 1910s and Los Angeles' population boom in the 1920s.

The period of significance has been identified as 1896 to 1939, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 93 total properties, 78% are contributors (one residence could not be evaluated, as it is not visible from the public right-of-way).

Name: Central Arlington Heights West Historic District*Description:

The Central Arlington Heights West Historic District is located in the Arlington Heights neighborhood of Los Angeles. One- and two-story, primarily single-family residences run along Bronson Avenue, 12th Avenue, and Norton Avenue, between Venice and Washington Boulevards, just east of Crenshaw Boulevard. The district follows the pattern of typical early 20th century streetcar suburbanization with its uniform blocks of rectilinear parcels laid out in a square grid, though it differentiates itself from other suburbs from this time period because of its uniquely wide streets. The grid is obstructed around Mt. Vernon Junior High School and Arlington Heights Elementary School, which lie just outside of the district. Consistent, deep setbacks contribute to the parkway-like feeling on Bronson Avenue. Consistently-spaced Mexican fan and Canary Island date palms line the sidewalks in the district. Properties retain uniform setbacks with lawns fronted by concrete sidewalks. All properties have driveways with curb cuts leading to rear detached garages.

The Craftsman style is the predominant architectural mode applied to buildings in the historic district. Most Craftsman-style residences have prominent full-width porches, clapboard or shingled exteriors, and gabled roofs with overhanging eaves. Of the 68 total properties, 56 contribute to the district's historic significance. A handful of 1920s Period Revival-style properties (mostly Spanish Colonial Revival and Mediterranean Revival) are located in the district as well.

Significance:

The Central Arlington Heights West Historic District is an excellent example of a single-family residential subdivision that was developed specifically due to its adjacency to historic streetcar routes. The district is also significant as an excellent concentration of Craftsman style houses, with a number of residences in Period Revival styles such as Spanish Colonial Revival and Mediterranean Revival. The dwellings in the district are generally larger than those on adjacent streets in the Arlington Heights neighborhood. Most are two stories in height and convey a high quality of design and craftsmanship. Contributing properties retain all the essential character-defining features of their respective styles.

The historic district was part of the Arlington Heights Extension subdivision, a 1900s streetcar suburb that was connected to the downtown business district by the Santa Monica (or Ocean Park) streetcar along 16th Street (now Venice Boulevard) to the north, and the Washington Boulevard streetcar line to the south. The 1906 subdivision of Arlington Heights Extension included lots that were more generous in size than others nearby, which provided for larger homes and more extensive landscaping.

The period of significance for the historic district is 1905 to 1927, the time period during which the majority of the buildings in the district were constructed (two properties pre-date the period significance; they were relocated to the area after it had been subdivided). Of the 68 properties, 82% are contributors to the historic district.

Name: Central Robertson Manor Historic District*Description:

The Central Robertson Manor Historic District is a single-family residential district located in the Mid-City neighborhood of Los Angeles. The district is bounded by 18th Street, Sawyer Street, Preuss Road, and Holt Avenue. The topography of the district is slightly hilly and streets are curvilinear with consistent street trees. Properties retain uniform setbacks fronted by broad lawns and concrete sidewalks. Nearly all houses in the district have concrete driveways leading to rear, detached garages.

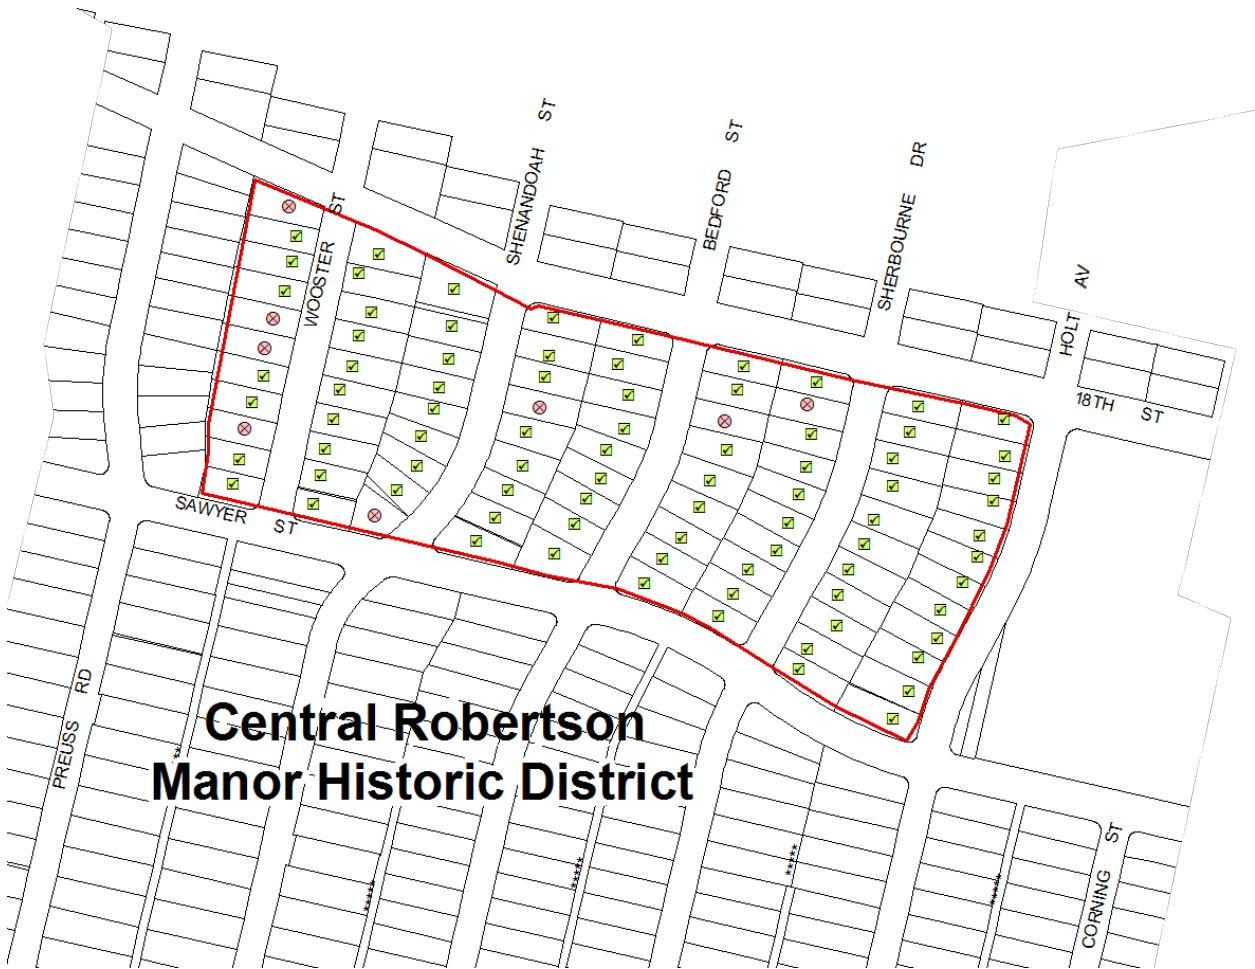

All the district's buildings are one-story in height and are built in the Spanish Colonial Revival, French Revival, and Minimal Traditional styles. Typical features of the residences include asymmetrical façades, stucco cladding, clay tile or composition shingle roofing, and consistent scale and massing. Of the 90 total properties, 82 are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

The Central Robertson Manor Historic District is an excellent example of a 1930s and '40s Period Revival neighborhood in Los Angeles. Residences within the district retain their original plans, massing, scale, and character-defining features, mostly of the Spanish Colonial Revival, French Revival, or Minimal Traditional style. The district is also significant for its association with prolific builder, developer, and subdivider Elwain Steinkamp, who had a significant impact on residential development in Los Angeles between the two World Wars.

The historic district is part of a larger subdivision developed by Steinkamp beginning in the late 1930s. Steinkamp's residential developments of this period were typically marketed as "fashion without extravagance for homes in the middle bracket group." Advertisements for Robertson Manor highlighted amenities of the development, including its proximity to schools, stores, and transportation routes.

The period of significance has been identified as 1938 to 1942, which is the period during which all the buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 90 total properties, 91% are contributors to the historic district.

Name: Chiswick Heights Historic District*Description:

The Chiswick Heights Historic District is located at the southwestern edge of the Arlington Heights neighborhood in Los Angeles. All the properties are located on Bronson Avenue, between Washington Boulevard to the north and the Interstate 10 Freeway to the south. The district is composed of mainly one- and two-story single-family residences and multi-family duplexes dating to the early 1920s (approximately half of the residences were constructed between 1922 and 1923). The district has a sloping topography, and Bronson Avenue runs at a northeast-southwest angle to the street grid. Street features include concrete sidewalks and grassy parkways; there are very few street trees. All buildings have consistent setbacks with front lawns, and the majority of properties have driveways with curb cuts leading to rear, detached garages.

Spanish Colonial Revival-style duplexes and Craftsman-style houses comprise much of the district. Spanish Colonial Revival residences feature stucco cladding, clay tile roofing or clay tile coping, and arched window and entrance openings. Most Craftsman residences retain wood clapboard siding, partial or full-width porches, and overhanging eaves. Of the 43 total buildings in the district, 37 are contributors.

Significance:

The Chiswick Heights Historic District is an excellent example of a residential subdivision that was developed specifically due to its adjacency to historic streetcar routes along Crenshaw, Washington, and Adams Boulevards. The mix of both single- and multi-family development is illustrative of the boom in population and residential construction that occurred in Los Angeles in the early 1920s.

Chiswick Heights was originally subdivided as the Chiswick Tract in 1912 by the Rindge and Mesa Land companies. The tract's name was derived from the original name of the street it is located on (Bronson Avenue was originally named Chiswick Drive). At the turn of the 20th century, subdividers capitalized on open land west of the historic boundaries of the city and the rapidly expanding network of streetcar lines for residential development. However, the Chiswick Tract was left largely undeveloped until the city's population boom of the early 1920s.

The period of significance has been identified as 1915 to 1941, which is the period during which all buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 43 total buildings in the district, 86% are contributors.

Name: Crenshaw Knolls Historic District*Description:

The Crenshaw Knolls Historic District is located in the Hyde Park neighborhood of South Los Angeles. It is located directly east of Crenshaw Boulevard and includes primarily one-story, single-family residences spanning seven blocks between 74th and 79th Streets. There are two churches within the district as well. The topography of the district is flat, and the district is distinguished by its rectilinear, gridded street pattern and a relative absence of street trees. Houses feature consistent setbacks and are fronted by broad lawns, concrete sidewalks and grassy parkways. Nearly all buildings have concrete driveways with curb cuts leading to rear, detached single-car garages.

Most of the dwellings within the district are one-story, Spanish Colonial Revival houses. Residences typically feature stucco cladding, clay tile roofing, arched entryways, leaded glass windows, and address number signs in the shape of coats of arms. Of the 260 total properties within the district, 218 contribute to its historic significance.

Significance:

The Crenshaw Knolls Historic District is significant as an excellent concentration of Period Revival dwellings from the late 1920s to the early 1940s. Residences within the district retain their original plans, massing, scale, and character-defining features, mostly of the Spanish Colonial Revival style. The district is also significant for its association with prolific builder, developer, and subdivider, Elwain Steinkamp, who had a significant impact on the residential development of interwar Los Angeles.

Steinkamp's residential developments of this period were typically marketed as "fashion without extravagance for homes in the middle bracket group," and complied strictly with FHA standards. Though not heavily advertised, the Crenshaw Knolls district is notably consistent in terms of design, scale, and style of buildings, typical of Steinkamp's developments.

The period of significance has been identified as 1928 to 1942, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 260 total properties, 84% are contributing buildings to the historic district.

Name: Crenshaw Mesa Historic District*Description:

The Crenshaw Mesa Historic District is composed of eight single- and multi-family properties on the west side of Crenshaw Boulevard, between Westmount Avenue and 52nd Street, in the Hyde Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. This portion of Crenshaw is elevated and separate from the rest of the corridor. Lot sizes are consistent, and properties retain uniform setbacks with sloped lawns fronted by concrete sidewalks. Most properties have driveways with curb cuts that lead to porte cochères and detached garages.

Residences are in the Mediterranean Revival, Spanish Colonial Revival, and Tudor Revival styles. Typical features include stucco cladding and arched window and door openings. Of the eight properties comprising the district, seven are contributors.

Significance:

The Crenshaw Mesa Historic District is an excellent concentration of Period Revival-style residences on Crenshaw Boulevard, which is otherwise a predominantly commercial thoroughfare. The dwellings present in this district are generally larger and more distinctive examples of their styles than others in the vicinity. Residences retain their original plans, massing, scale and character-defining features, mostly of the Spanish Colonial Revival, Tudor Revival, and Mediterranean Revival styles.

The period of significance has been identified as 1925 to 1936, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the eight total properties, 88% contribute to the district's historic significance.

Name: Crenshaw Seinan Historic District*Description:

The Crenshaw Seinan Historic District is located on and adjacent to Crenshaw Boulevard, just north of the Leimert Park neighborhood in South Los Angeles. It includes properties on Crenshaw Boulevard, Bronson Avenue, and Norton Avenue between Coliseum Street and 39th Street. The district includes two commercial properties on Crenshaw, multi-family properties on Bronson, and single-family properties on Norton. The topography of the area is generally flat, and streets largely follow a rectilinear street grid pattern (Norton Avenue is slightly curved at its south end). Lot sizes are consistent, and properties retain uniform setbacks with attached or detached rear garages (multi-family residences have parking at the rear of the property). Landscaping on both Bronson and Norton reflects Japanese design traditions, including asymmetrical configuration of elements, widely varied textures, use of rocks and natural materials, and closely clipped vegetation to achieve a sculptural (or bonsai) effect.

The multi-family properties on Bronson Avenue are two stories in height and were designed in the Oriental Ranch style. Typical features of the multi-family residences include decorative screens applied to façades, low-pitched roofs with wide overhanging eaves, and the use of stucco and stone veneer as architectural details. The single-family dwellings on Norton Avenue are mostly Minimal Traditional or Minimal Ranch in style, some with Japanese-influenced detailing on window grilles and garage doors. The commercial properties on Crenshaw are two stories in height and are vernacular in style. They retain central courtyards and extensive surface parking. The properties are included in the district for their association with the Japanese community. Of the 71 total properties, 69 are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

The Crenshaw Seinan Historic District is significant for its association with the Japanese American community that settled here in the years following World War II. The word “Seinan” refers to the Nisei (second generation) population in Southwest Los Angeles, specifically in Jefferson Park and the Crenshaw district. Although the postwar Seinan community was far more widespread than the boundaries of this district, this concentration of resources is significant because it was developed by Nisei, marketed toward Nisei, and promoted for its ethnic character through visual characteristics evocative of Japanese design traditions. Whereas the Japanese American subdivisions of Jefferson Park attempted to assimilate into their mostly-white surroundings, at Crenshaw Seinan the Japanese-style architecture and landscaping were “highlighted as central, distinguishing features” (Scott Kurashige, The Shifting Ground of Race: Black and Japanese Americans in the Making of Multiethnic Los Angeles, 2008).

After the end of World War II, and as Japanese American internees began to return to Los Angeles, many settled in the Jefferson Park area where a number of Nisei had begun to locate decades earlier. By the 1950s, the area was known to many as “the new Little Tokyo,” the Los Angeles center of Japanese American commerce and residence. By the late 1950s, the Japanese American community was established enough to begin major commercial investment in Crenshaw Boulevard. Such development included the Holiday Bowl bowling alley (now mostly demolished) just north of Coliseum Street, and Crenshaw Square between Coliseum and 39th Streets (within the boundaries of this district). Crenshaw Square was developed almost concurrently with the subdivision of houses and apartments directly to the east on Bronson and Norton Avenues. With shops facing both Crenshaw and Bronson, residents of the subdivision to the east had direct access to the stores within Crenshaw Plaza, which were largely owned by and catered to the Nisei population.

Residential development on Bronson and Norton Avenues commenced in 1956 and was fully built out by 1961. Prior to 1956, the land was undeveloped and carried the stigma of being the location of the discovery of the body of Elizabeth Short in the notorious Black Dahlia murder of 1947. As the dwellings were constructed, the streets took on a Japanese aesthetic with subtle design features in the buildings themselves and, perhaps more notably, with landscaping elements inspired by Japanese landscaping traditions. The district today retains a high level of integrity with few physical changes and a continuum of the Japanese landscaping traditions, which provides for a distinct sense of place and history. The period of significance has been identified as 1956 to 1961, which is the period during which the buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 71 total properties, 97% are contributors to the district.

Name: Davidson Villa Historic District*Description:

The Davidson Villa Historic District is located at the southwestern edge of the Arlington Heights neighborhood in Los Angeles. The district is composed of multi-family residences along 21st Street between 10th Avenue to the east and Bronson Avenue to the west. The district is sited on a slightly curved, narrow tree-lined street. The topography of the district is generally flat. Lot sizes are consistent, and properties retain uniform setbacks fronted by lawns and concrete sidewalks. Most properties have driveways with curb cuts leading to rear detached garages.

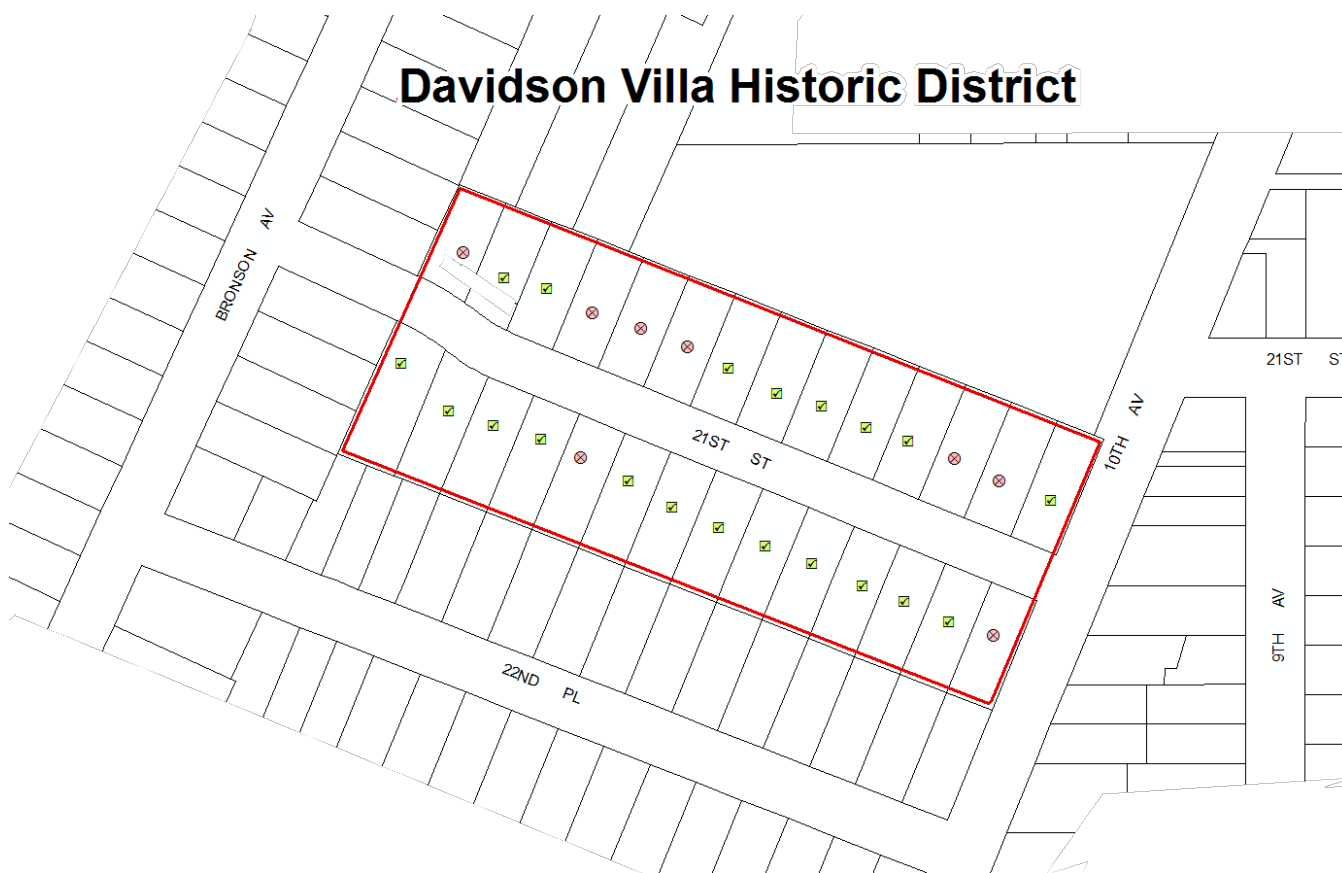

The district contains two-story duplexes, fourplexes, and apartment houses primarily in the Spanish Colonial and Mediterranean Revival styles. Typical architectural features include clay tile roofing, stucco cladding and arched entryways. Of the 28 total properties, 20 are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

The Davidson Villa Historic District is an excellent example of a multi-family residential neighborhood developed due to its proximity to historic streetcar routes. The district is also a significant concentration of 1920s multi-family dwellings in a range of Period Revival styles. Buildings within the district retain their original plans, massing, scale, and character-defining features of their respective styles, mostly Spanish Colonial Revival and Mediterranean Revival.

The Davidson Villa Historic District comprises a single residential tract that was subdivided in 1922. The development of multi-family duplexes and fourplexes began soon after. Constructed near the Washington Boulevard streetcar line, the district represents a period of increased density in neighborhoods adjacent to streetcar routes as the population of the city grew exponentially during the early 1920s.

The period of significance has been identified as 1923 to 1929, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 28 total properties, 71% are contributors to the historic district.

Name: Donna Park Historic District*Description:

Donna Park Historic District is located in the northern area of the Leimert Park neighborhood in South Los Angeles. It includes one-story single-family residences on Dublin and Roxton Avenues between Rodeo Road and 39th Street. The topography of the district is generally flat. While Roxton follows a rectilinear grid pattern, Dublin curves slightly at its southern end. Both streets are lined with mature jacaranda and other shade trees. Lot sizes are mostly consistent (they vary slightly where Dublin curves), and properties retain uniform setbacks fronted by lawns and concrete sidewalks. Each of the houses was designed with a detached garage at the rear of the lot accessed via a driveway along the north or south sides of the property line.

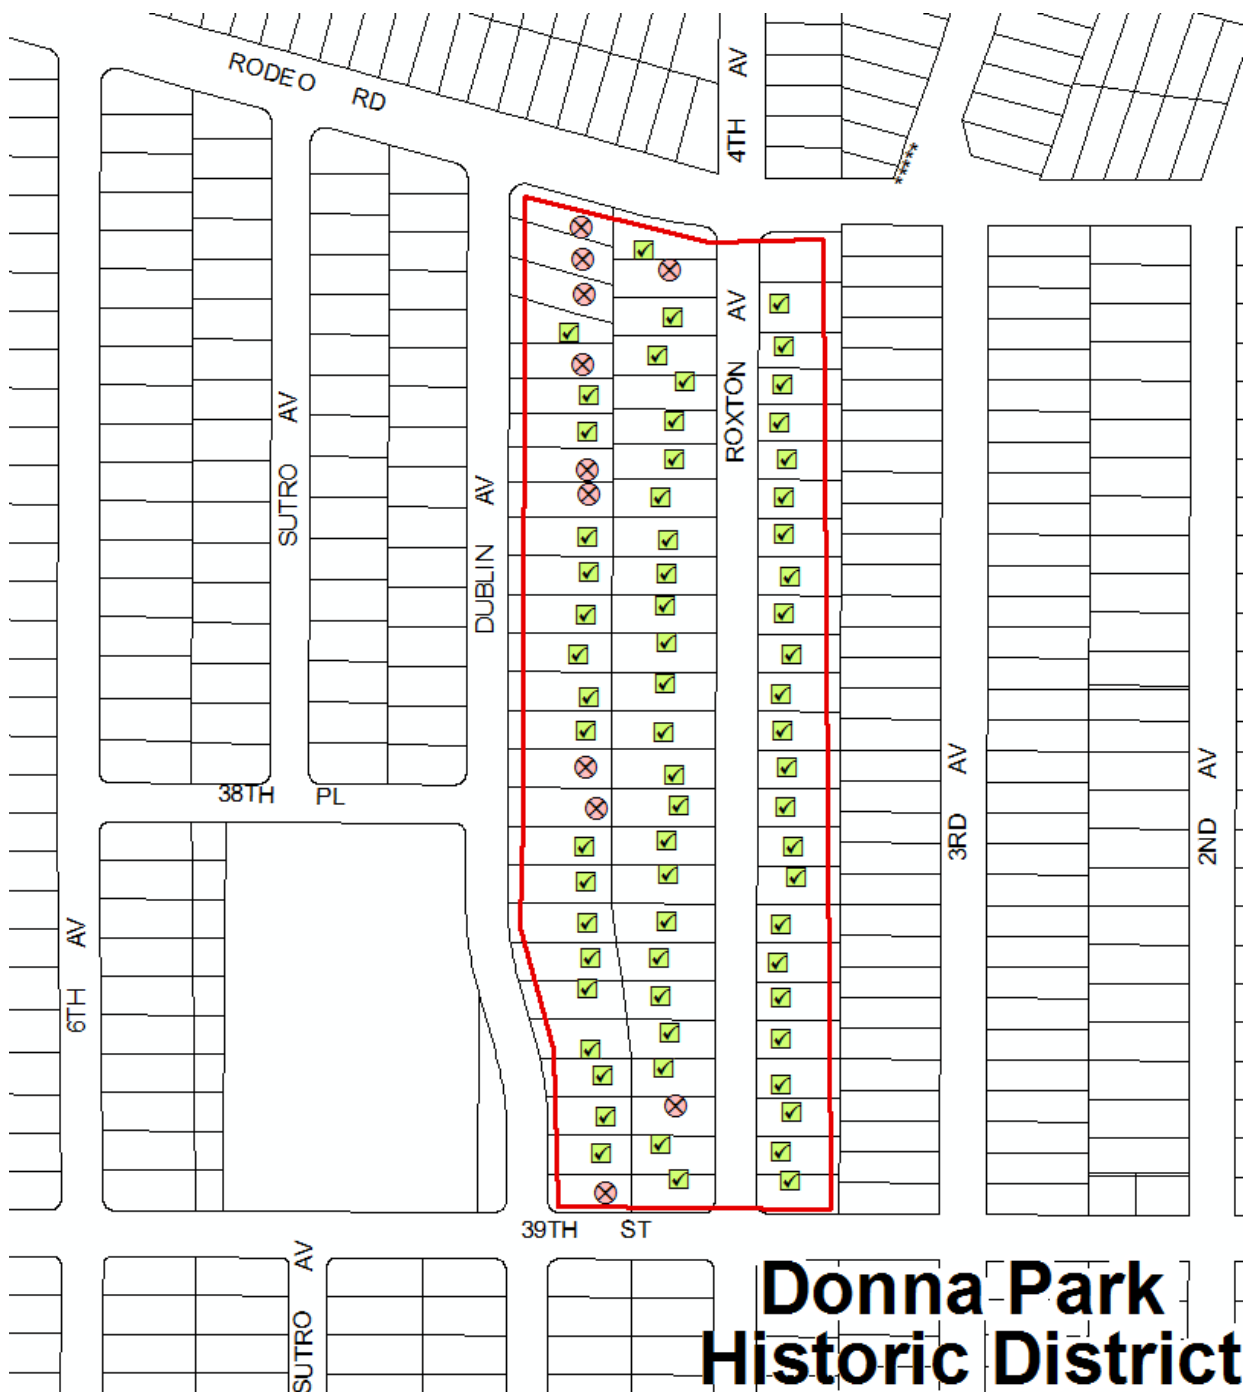

The district is composed of one-story houses primarily built in the Spanish Colonial Revival style; some are Minimal Traditional in style. Typical features of the Spanish Colonial Revival-style residences include asymmetrical façades, stucco exterior walls, multi-light casement windows, towers/turrets, arched window and door openings, and clay tile roofs. Residences designed in the Minimal Traditional style are simpler, but retain the same massing and scale as the Spanish Colonial Revival houses in the neighborhood. Of the 77 buildings within the district, 66 are contributors to the district's significance.

Significance:

Donna Park Historic District is an excellent example of a 1930s subdivision with a notable concentration of Period Revival style dwellings. Residences within the district retain their original plans, massing, scale, and character-defining features of their respective styles, mostly Spanish Colonial Revival and Minimal Traditional. It is also significant for its association with prolific Los Angeles builder, developer, and subdivider Elwain Steinkamp, who had a significant impact on residential development in Los Angeles between the two World Wars. The residential development was named for Steinkamp's wife, Donna.

The boundaries of the district follow the boundaries of the original subdivision, which dates to 1936. Steinkamp's residential developments of this period were typically marketed as "fashion without extravagance for homes in the middle bracket group," and complied strictly with FHA standards. Buildings within the Donna Park district are consistent in terms of design, scale, and style, typical of Steinkamp developments. At least two of the homes in Donna Park were used and advertised widely as May Company Model Homes, displaying interiors and furnishings provided by the retail company.

The period of significance has been identified as 1936 to 1939, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the district's 77 total buildings, 86% were found to be contributing resources.

Name: La Fayette Road Historic District*Description:

The La Fayette Road Historic District is located in the Mid-City neighborhood of Los Angeles. It abuts the City-designated Lafayette Square Historic Preservation Overlay Zone (HPOZ), which is directly to the east. All properties within the district are located on La Fayette Road between Venice Boulevard to the north and culminating in a cul-de-sac to the south, near St. Charles Place. One- and two-story duplexes and fourplexes, as well as a handful of single-family residences comprise the district. The topography of the district is sloped, as La Fayette Road slightly rises in elevation southwards from its intersection with Venice Boulevard. The district is characterized by tightly-spaced lots, narrow setbacks, and a relatively narrow street. Dwellings are fronted by concrete walkways and grassy parkways. Many of the buildings have driveways with curb cuts leading to detached rear garages.

Architectural styles represented in the district include Tudor Revival, Spanish Colonial Revival, and American Colonial Revival. Common architectural features include stucco cladding and arched window and door openings. Of the 35 total properties, 32 are contributors to the district's historic significance.

Significance:

The La Fayette Road Historic District is an excellent example of a 1920s to 1930s multi-family residential neighborhood containing a variety of multi-family housing types. It also contains a notable concentration of Period Revival residential architecture. The district retains original tract and automobile-related features, including concrete sidewalks, driveways with curb cuts, and detached rear garages. Buildings within the district retain their original plans, massing, scale and character-defining features, mostly of the Tudor Revival, American Colonial Revival, and Spanish Colonial Revival styles.

The La Fayette Road Historic District was subdivided as a single tract in 1921. The densely-developed district is reflective of Los Angeles' 1920s population boom, resulting in rapid growth and development across the city. The period of significance has been identified as 1922 to 1939, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 35 total properties, 91% were found to be contributing resources.

Name: Leimert Park Historic District*Description:

The Leimert Park Historic District is located in the South Crenshaw area of South Los Angeles. The district includes 1,697 single- and multi-family residences, commercial properties, and institutional buildings roughly bounded by 39th Street, Vernon Avenue, Crenshaw Boulevard, and 3rd Avenue. The topography of the district is generally flat, and streets generally follow a rectilinear grid pattern. Exceptions to this include Leimert Boulevard, Creed Avenue, and Garthwaite Avenue, which run northeast-southwest, towards the commercial center of the historic district. Leimert Boulevard, 8th Avenue, 42nd Street, and Degnan Boulevard feature wide landscaped medians, and mature shade trees are prominent throughout the district. Leimert Park is primarily composed of one- and two-story single- and multi-family residences. Originally restricted to major thoroughfares, multi-family duplexes, fourplexes, courtyard apartments, and apartment houses are located along the district's larger corridors, including Leimert, Degnan, and Crenshaw Boulevards, as well as 8th, Garthwaite, and Creed Avenues. Properties north of Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard are almost exclusively residential, and most are single-family houses. These properties also tend to be later (mid-1930s to 1950s) than those south of Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard because they were developed as part of the second construction phase of Leimert Park. Residential properties retain fairly uniform setbacks (shallower on large corridors) and are fronted by lawns and concrete sidewalks.

A substantial commercial district sits in the southwest region of the district. It includes several one- and two-story retail storefront properties, a theatre, and a small formally-landscaped park, known as Leimert Plaza (Los Angeles Historic-Cultural Monument No. 620). The Vision Theatre, built in 1932, was designed by Morgan, Walls & Clements. It appears to be individually eligible for listing in the National Register, the California Register, and as a Los Angeles Historic-Cultural Monument. Three schools – Audubon Middle School, Forty Second Street Elementary School, and Transfiguration Church and School – date from the 1920s and '30s, and are located within the district.

The dominant architectural style is Spanish Colonial Revival; others prominent styles include Mediterranean Revival, Tudor Revival, French Revival, Streamline Moderne, and Minimal Traditional. Most commercial properties are vernacular in style. Of the 1,697 total properties, 1,461 are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

The Leimert Park Historic District is an excellent example of a 1920s-early 1930s planned community in South Los Angeles. The district also contains a significant concentration of Period Revival-style architecture. Buildings retain their original plans, massing, scale and character-defining features, mostly of the Spanish Colonial Revival, Mediterranean Revival, Tudor Revival, and French Revival styles. Lastly, the district is significant as a postwar African American and Japanese American enclave, which in previous decades was restricted to white residents.

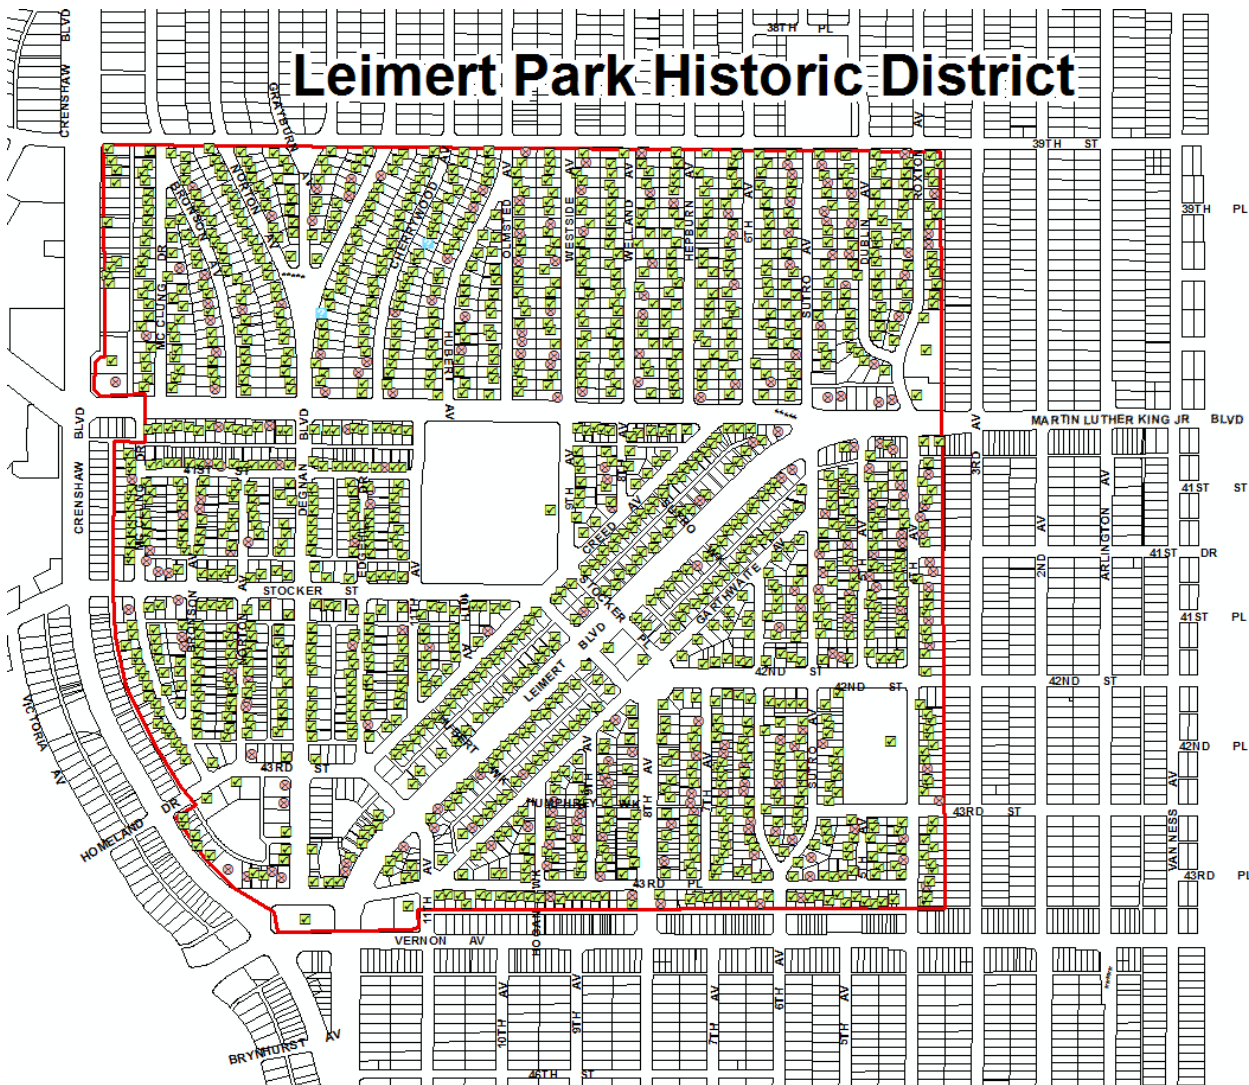

Developed by Walter H. Leimert, Leimert Park was subdivided in the mid-1920s and early 1930s as a planned community of single- and multi-family residences, schools, and a small commercial district. The development consisted of multiple phases. The first phase, which opened to the public in 1927, was bounded by Santa Barbara Avenue (now Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard) to the north, West Vernon Avenue to the South, Angeles Mesa Drive (now Crenshaw Boulevard) to the east, and Arlington Avenue to the west. The second phase opened in 1933 and extended the community north to approximately 39th Avenue.

The earliest-built model homes were marketed to middle-income homeowners as having cutting edge amenities and furnishings, such as refrigeration by gas, and were routinely opened to the public for tours and viewing. All utilities were installed below ground prior to paving, which was a new innovation at the time. A robust landscaping plan was implemented throughout the development process; magnolias, Lombardy poplars, cypresses, palms, oaks, and olives were among the thousands of trees planted along sidewalks and in grassy medians. Architects who contributed designs for model homes include Roland E. Coate, Gordon B. Kaufmann, Carl Jules Weyl, and George J. Adams, all of whom collaborated with City

Planning architect Franz Herding during the development of Leimert Park. Builders included Adolph Horowitz, Otto Fitzhum, George J. Heltzer, P.T. Barnes, Irving Gray, Phil Mann, Myron Weinstein, M. Lewis Lehman, and C.C. Reese.

Like many 1920s and '30s neighborhoods in Los Angeles, Leimert Park maintained racially-restrictive housing practices favoring white residents. After World War II, however, a small number of African American and Japanese American families moved to Leimert Park, despite violent opposition from white homeowner groups and real estate agents. The district's black population continued to increase in the decades after the war and is now home to a substantial number of African American residents. Two properties in the historic district were recorded individually for their association with Ella Fitzgerald and Ray Charles, both renowned African American musicians. Both individuals began residing in Leimert Park in the 1950s.

The district has multiple periods of significance, reflecting the different contexts under which it is significant. Leimert Park's period of significance for its development as a planned residential community begins in 1926, when the first phase of the subdivision was completed, and ends in 1933 when the second phase of development opened to the public. The district's period of significance as an excellent collection of Period Revival architecture begins in 1926, when its first building was constructed, and ends in 1945, with the end of World War II and the decline of Period Revival as a popular architectural mode. Its period of significance for its association with the African American and Japanese American community begins in 1948, when the U.S. Supreme Court banned the enforcement of racially-restrictive housing covenants and ends in 1970, when the demographics of the neighborhood had shifted to become a predominantly African American community. Of the 1,697 total properties, 86% contribute to the historic significance of the district (two properties could not be evaluated, as they were largely not visible from the public right-of-way).

Name: Pico Boulevard Streetcar Commercial Historic District*Description:

The Pico Boulevard Streetcar Commercial Historic District is located in the northern part of the Arlington Heights neighborhood in Los Angeles. It consists of 16 commercial properties along the south side of Pico Boulevard between Arlington Avenue to the east and 6th Avenue to the west. The topography of the district is relatively flat, and Pico curves slightly towards the west end of the district. One- and two-story retail storefronts and mixed-use commercial properties (with residential accommodations at the second story) comprise the majority of the district. Consistent with commercial development accommodating the streetcar, all buildings are built out to the sidewalk with little to no parking.

Architectural styles represented include Spanish Colonial Revival, Neoclassical, and Renaissance Revival; however, most properties are vernacular in style. Buildings typically feature large display windows and stucco cladding; some have canted storefronts. Of the 16 total properties, 10 are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

The Pico Boulevard Streetcar Commercial Historic District is a rare intact stretch of commercial development associated with the location and service of a historic streetcar route in Los Angeles. The district is located along the Pico Heights streetcar line, which was originally established in 1887 and later run and operated by the Los Angeles Railway Company. Pico Heights, the first electric streetcar line in the city, stretched from downtown to Arlington Avenue, which in the late 1890s was the city's western boundary; by the 1920s it extended to Rimpau Boulevard. The streetcar line was built to serve a number of residential communities, among them the Arlington Heights neighborhood, adjacent to the commercial historic district.

The period of significance has been identified as 1906 to 1927, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 16 total properties, 63% contribute to its historic significance. There are a few buildings constructed outside the period of significance within the historic district boundaries. The infill that occurred after World War II, in addition to storefront alterations and window replacements, has compromised the overall integrity of the historic district in such a way that it may not retain sufficient integrity for National Register eligibility.

Context 1:

| Context:       | Commercial Development, 1850-1980  |
| Theme:         | Streetcar Commercial Development, 1873-1934  |
| Property type: | Streetcar Commercial District  |
| Criteria:      | A/1/1&C/3/3  |
| Status code:   | 3CS;5S3  |
| Reason:        | Rare intact example of a 1900s to 1920s commercial historic district associated with the Pico Heights streetcar line that ran along Pico Boulevard. Most examples of streetcar commercial development from this time period no longer retain integrity. Due to storefront alterations and some infill starting in the late 1940s, the commercial district may not retain sufficient integrity to be eligible for listing in the National Register. |

Name: St. Elmo Village Historic District*Description:

The St. Elmo Village Historic District is an artists' colony of residences, studios, galleries, and classrooms located in a cluster of small bungalows in the Mid-City neighborhood of Los Angeles. It includes six properties on the south side of St. Elmo Drive between Rimpau Boulevard to the east and Longwood Avenue to the west.

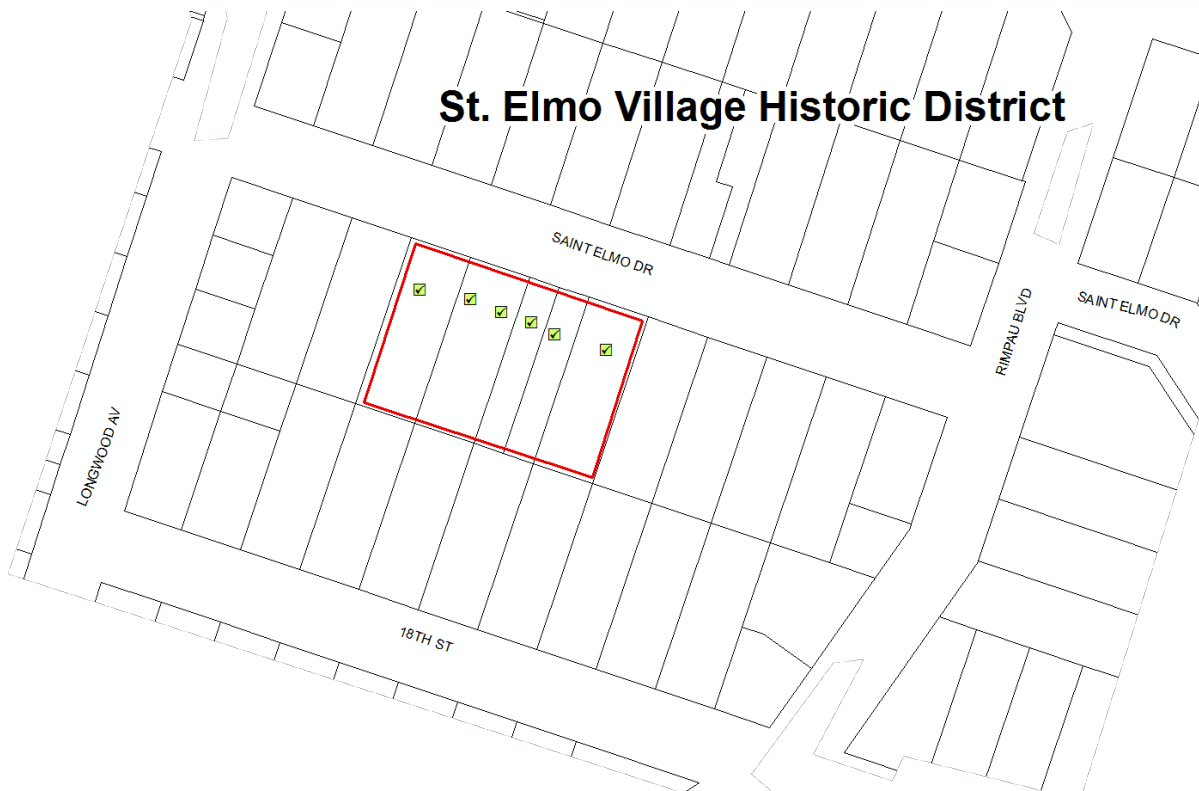

The district comprises approximately twelve buildings, including ten single-family residences dating between 1913 and 1923 with a shared rear garage, and one multi-family apartment building on its own parcel dating from 1961. The majority of buildings are modest, wood-frame structures constructed in the Craftsman style. Five buildings are sited along the front of four parcels and have entrances facing St. Elmo Drive. Another five buildings are sited to the rear of the same lots and form a courtyard behind the street-facing buildings. The 1960s apartment house to the west of the cluster appears to be a later incorporation into the complex and has been painted and landscaped to create cohesion with the one-story buildings despite its difference in style, scale, and form. The district is further distinguished by murals and extensive designed landscaping associated with its use as an artist colony and education center. All of the buildings comprising the district were found to be contributing resources.

Significance:

The St. Elmo Village Historic District is significant as for its association with the visual arts in Los Angeles, providing arts education, support, facilitation, and growth. It was founded by and continues to be associated with noted local muralists Roderick and Jacqueline Sykes. Murals by the couple may be found throughout the Los Angeles area, including building façades on Pico and Venice Boulevards, and on sound walls along the Harbor Freeway in South Los Angeles.

St. Elmo Village began as an informal artist community in the mid-1960s. It was founded by Roderick Sykes and his uncle Rozzell Sykes. The residents painted the walls, walkways, sidewalks, and buildings. They planted a courtyard garden of succulents and cacti in the courtyard between residences. The community incorporated as a non-profit in 1971 in order to purchase the buildings and prevent their demolition and the displacement of the community. As part of its non-profit operation, the seven artists-in-residence offer free art classes to community youth.

The period of significance of St. Elmo Village begins in 1965 when the community formed. The artist's colony continues to thrive at this location to this day. Of the buildings that are visible from the public right-of-way, 100% are contributors. Additional buildings are not visible from the public right-of-way, but likely contribute to the historic significance of the property as well.

Name: Victoria Park Historic District*Description:

The Victoria Park Historic District is a single- and multi-family residential district located in the Mid-City neighborhood of Los Angeles. The district is bounded by Pico Boulevard to the north, Venice Boulevard to the south, Victoria Avenue to the east and West Boulevard to the west; its main entrance is off Pico Boulevard via Windsor Boulevard. The district is centered around an oval-shaped street (Victoria Park Drive), which surrounds an island of residences. Victoria Park comprises 96 buildings, mainly single-family residences and duplexes, dating between 1908 and 1930. Though the topography of the district is generally flat, it sits on a plateau which provides for commanding views of the Hollywood Hills. The district is further characterized by Mexican fan palms dating to the time of subdivision, concrete sidewalks, and grassy parkways. Due to the curvilinear street plan, lots are large and irregular. All properties maintain deep setbacks, with broad lawns or landscaped front yards with hedges. Nearly all dwellings have driveways leading to rear, detached garages.

Residential buildings in the district are large two- and two-and-a-half-story single-family houses and duplexes. Common architectural styles include various Arts and Craft-era styles as well as the Spanish Colonial Revival and Mediterranean Revival styles; there are also a few residences designed in the American Colonial Revival, Tudor Revival, and Minimal Traditional styles. Craftsman residences with Japanese, Swiss, and Airplane bungalow details feature partial or full-width porches, wide eaves with exposed rafters, and clapboard siding. Spanish Colonial Revival and Mediterranean Revival buildings retain stucco cladding, clay tile roofs, and arched entryways. The district includes two designated Los Angeles Historic-Cultural Monuments – the Craftsman Mansion (HCM #654, 4318 Victoria Park Place) and the Holmes Shannon House (HCM #885, 4311 Victoria Park Drive). Of the 92 total properties, 72 contribute to the district's historic significance.

Significance:

The Victoria Park Historic District is a significant example of a residential subdivision developed in the early 20th century specifically due to its adjacency to historic streetcar routes. It also contains a notable concentration of Arts and Crafts and Period Revival style residential architecture. Residences within the district retain their original plans, massing, scale, and character-defining features of their respective styles, mostly Spanish Colonial Revival, Mediterranean Revival, and Craftsman.

The historic district was subdivided as the Victoria Park tract in 1907, occupying land once part of Rancho Las Cienegas. Early advertisements boasted the subdivision's "especially good [street]car service" and described it as a "desirable residence tract for desirable people." Situated on a plateau directly adjacent to the Pico Heights and 16th Street (Venice Boulevard) streetcar lines, the subdivision was well sited and residential lots sold and developed quickly. The subdivision featured such improvements as concrete sidewalks, wide, paved roadways, landscaped parkways, electroliers (streetlamps), and palm trees.

The period of significance has been identified as 1908 to 1930, the period during which most of the buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 92 total properties, 78% contribute to the historic district's significance.

Name: Wellington Square Historic District*Description:

The Wellington Square Historic District is located in Central Los Angeles, directly west of Crenshaw Boulevard, between Washington Boulevard to the north and the Interstate 10 Freeway to the south. Buckingham Road is its western terminus. The district is composed of 208 single-family residences primarily built between 1903 and 1942. The topography of the district is flat, and streets run northeast-southwest. The district is further characterized by its street trees, wide streets, concrete sidewalks, grassy parkways, and a landscaped median at the northern section of Wellington Road. Properties retain uniform setbacks fronted by lawns. Most residences feature concrete driveways with curb cuts leading to detached rear garages.

The historic district is largely composed of two-story single-family residences in various Period Revival styles. Styles represented include Mediterranean Revival, Spanish Colonial Revival, Tudor Revival, and French Revival, with scattered examples of other styles including American Foursquare and Craftsman. Stucco cladding, clay tile roofing, and arched window and door openings are common architectural features throughout the district. Of the 208 total properties, 166 properties contribute to the historic character of the district.

Significance:

The Wellington Square Historic District is a significant excellent example of a residential subdivision developed in the early 20th century specifically due to its adjacency to historic streetcar routes. It also contains a notable concentration of Period Revival style residential architecture. Buildings within the district retain their original plans, massing, scale, and character-defining features of their respective styles, mostly Spanish Colonial Revival, Mediterranean Revival, French Revival, and Tudor Revival.

The historic district was subdivided in 1912 by the Crenshaw Trust and Realty Company and the Union Escrow and Realty Company. By the 1910s, the district was well-served by streetcar lines along Washington and Adams Boulevards. Early advertisements in the Los Angeles Times boasted that Wellington Square was the “choicest offering along Washington and West Adams,” providing the “exclusiveness and the advantage of all modern conveniences and improvements.” Although the subdivision was directly adjacent to a number of streetcar lines, advertisements noted its proximity to “excellent boulevards,” only “15 minutes by auto to the business and shopping center.”

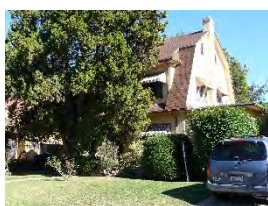

The period of significance has been identified as 1903 to 1942, which is the period during which most buildings in the historic district were constructed. Of the 208 total buildings in the district, 80% were found to be contributing resources.

Name: West Arlington Heights Historic District*Description:

The West Arlington Heights Historic District consists of one- and two-story, single- and multi-family residences located in the Arlington Heights neighborhood of Los Angeles. The district is generally bounded by the alley behind commercial properties along Washington Boulevard, the Interstate 10 Freeway, 10th Avenue, and the alley between 2nd and 3rd Avenues. The topography of the district is flat. The district exemplifies early 20th century streetcar suburbanization with its uniform blocks of rectilinear parcels laid out in a square grid pattern. The streets are of a consistent, slightly narrow width, with the exception of 4th Avenue, which is wide and landscaped with palm trees. Street trees are sparse and inconsistent throughout the district. Properties have uniform, shallow front lawns with paths from the sidewalk leading to front porches or entry porticos. There are driveways with curb cuts along the sides of the majority of residences leading to detached rear garages.

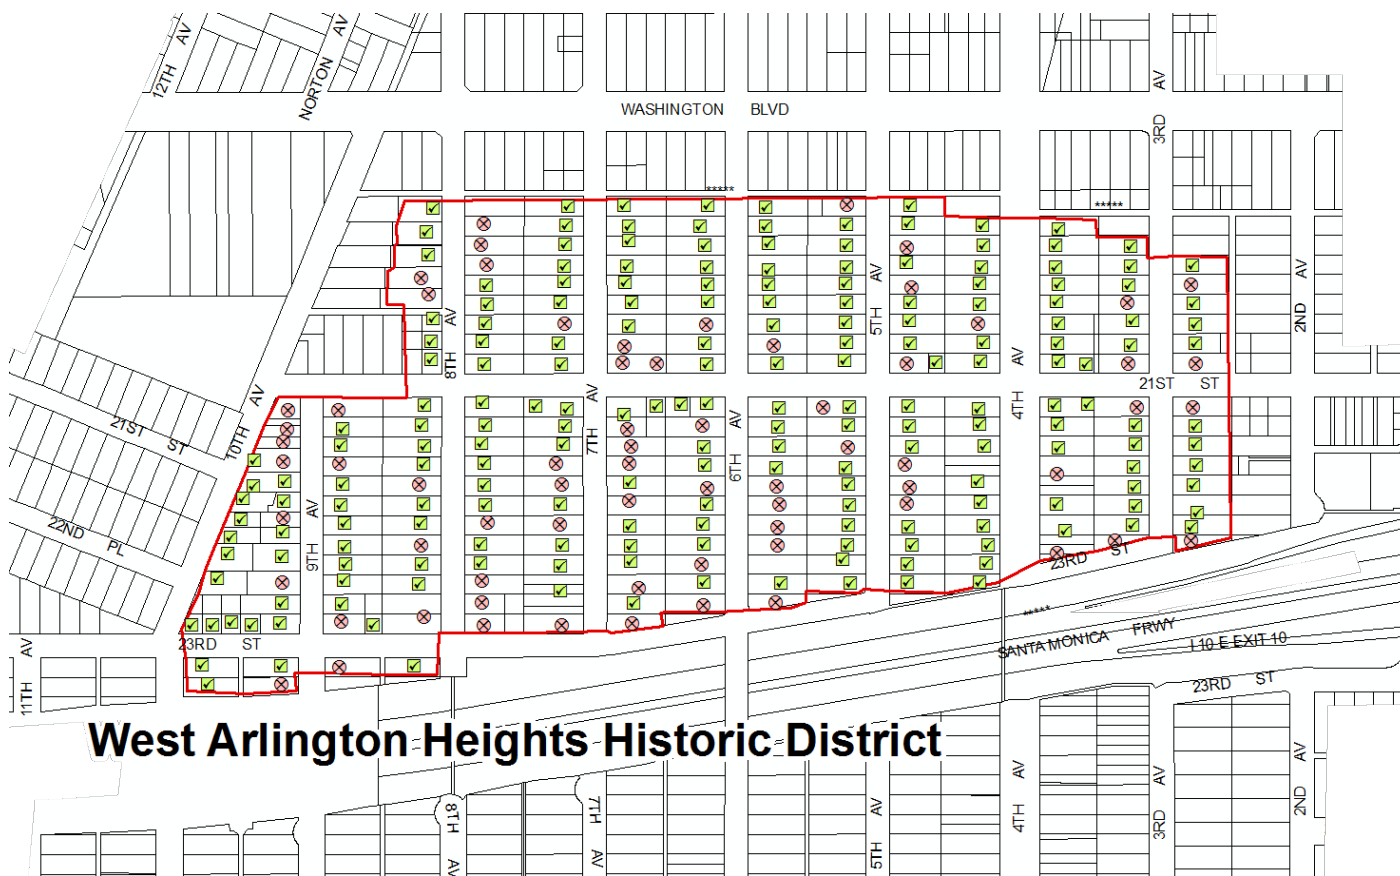

Styles represented within the district include Craftsman and various Period Revival styles such as Spanish Colonial Revival and Mediterranean Revival. Most Craftsman-style residences retain wood clapboard siding, wide overhanging eaves, and partial or full-width porches. Spanish Colonial Revival and Mediterranean Revival buildings typically feature stucco cladding, clay tile roofing or clay tile coping, and arched entryways. Of the 268 total properties 200 are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

The West Arlington Heights Historic District is significant as a residential suburb developed specifically due to its proximity to historic streetcar routes. The district, located south of the original Pico Heights (on Pico Boulevard), Ocean Park (on Venice Boulevard), and Washington Boulevard streetcar lines, reflects the increased pressure for higher density residential development near urban amenities and streetcar connections prior to the widespread availability of the automobile.

The historic district is part of the larger Arlington Heights tract, bounded by Arlington Avenue, 6th Street, Pico Boulevard, and Adams Boulevard. Located on a plateau, advertisements for Arlington Heights highlighted its commanding views of Hollywood and the mountains, sheltered from the noise and bustle of the city. Though subdivided by 1887, in conjunction with the establishment of the Pico Heights streetcar line, development of the tract did not begin in earnest until the early 1900s; most houses constructed in the historic district date from the 1900s and 1910s.

The period of significance has been identified as 1905 to 1940, which is the period during which the majority of buildings within the district were constructed. Of the 268 total properties, 75% are contributors to the historic district.

Name: 3022-3032 9th Ave Bungalow Court

Description:

The 3022-3032 9th Ave Bungalow Court occupies a single rectangular parcel in the Jefferson Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. The bungalow court comprises three freestanding, Spanish Colonial Revival-style one-story buildings situated around a central courtyard. The court retains distinctive features of the property type, including a courtyard landscaped with an allée of palm trees and two rear detached garages.

Significance:

The 3022-3032 9th Ave Bungalow Court is an excellent example of an intact 1920s bungalow court in the Jefferson Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. Once a common residential property type in Los Angeles, bungalow courts that remain intact are increasingly rare. Constructed in 1925, this bungalow court is one of few remaining examples in the area that retains its original site plan, landscape and hardscape elements, and architectural features. Due to window replacements, the bungalow court may not retain sufficient integrity for National Register eligibility.

Name: 3434-3442 11th Ave Courtyard Apartment*Description:

3434-3442 11th Avenue is a courtyard apartment constructed in the Streamline Moderne style. The apartment complex comprises two freestanding, single-story buildings of approximately three units each that are situated around a central courtyard with stepped-back entrances to individual units. The buildings are situated around a landscaped courtyard with lawn, mature vegetation, and a shared concrete walkway. Each retains the features of the Streamline Moderne style, including smooth stucco cladding, curved wall surfaces, and flat roofs.

Significance:

3434-3442 11th Avenue Courtyard Apartment is an excellent example of a Streamline Moderne-style courtyard apartment in the Jefferson Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. Constructed in 1940, the property retains all the essential character-defining features of the property type and Streamline Moderne style.

Name: Alta Loma Elementary School*Description:

Alta Loma Elementary School is a Los Angeles Unified School District (LAUSD) elementary school campus located at 1745 Vineyard Avenue in the Mid-City neighborhood of Los Angeles. The campus is situated on a 3.5-acre site composed of several smaller parcels surrounded by streetcar suburbs as well as later residential development from the 1930s. The campus contains roughly seven buildings (numbers were estimated from aerial photos, as not all buildings are visible from the public right-of-way). Three of the buildings, located at the east end of the site, are original to the post-1933 campus. The west half of the campus is largely composed of paved open space for recreational purposes.

The campus' earliest buildings were constructed from 1935 to 1937 after the Long Beach Earthquake. The 1930s buildings are one story in height and are constructed of reinforced poured concrete. They were designed by Charles M. Hutchinson in the PWA Moderne style, featuring flat roofs, vertically striped pilasters, and geometrically-patterned window and door surrounds. The main building faces Vineyard Avenue and is fronted by lawn and concrete walkways. Alterations to the campus include the addition of a few buildings to the site during the 1960s and '70s.

Significance:

Alta Loma Elementary School is an excellent example of a LAUSD elementary school campus that was built largely in response to the substantial damage schools experienced during the 1933 Long Beach Earthquake. It is also an excellent example of PWA Moderne institutional architecture; contributing buildings retain all the essential characteristics of the style.

In 1915, Sprague Avenue School was constructed on the present Alta Loma Elementary School campus. Between 1915 and 1927, the school became known as Alta Loma Grammar School. Like most schools built prior to 1933, the former Alta Loma school was severely damaged during the Long Beach Earthquake and its buildings were demolished. After the earthquake, the LAUSD awarded $21,000 to the elementary school to construct an auditorium designed by Charles M. Hutchinson. By 1937, an administration and classroom building were also added to the campus.

The post-1933 campus buildings are intact; however, additional buildings were added between original buildings and to the west half of the site beginning in the 1960s. The period of significance for Alta Loma Elementary School is 1935 to 1937, reflecting its period of reconstruction following the 1933 Long Beach Earthquake.

Name: Angeles Mesa Streetcar Suburb Planning District*Description:

The Angeles Mesa Streetcar Suburb Planning District is located in the Hyde Park-Angeles Mesa area of Los Angeles. The district is centered on Crenshaw Boulevard between 52nd Street and Slauson Boulevard and includes three to five residential blocks to the east and west of Crenshaw. It contains roughly 700 properties, the majority of which are single-family dwellings, with some multi-family properties scattered throughout. Commercial and institutional properties are primarily located on Crenshaw Boulevard and date from the early 1920s to the present. The topography of the planning district is generally flat, and streets follow a rectilinear grid pattern. The district features relatively consistent lot sizes (modest in size), uniform setbacks, and intermittent street trees. Residential properties are fronted by lawns and concrete sidewalks.

A smaller streetcar commercial historic district was identified within the boundaries of the planning district at the intersection of 54th and Crenshaw (near the center of the district).

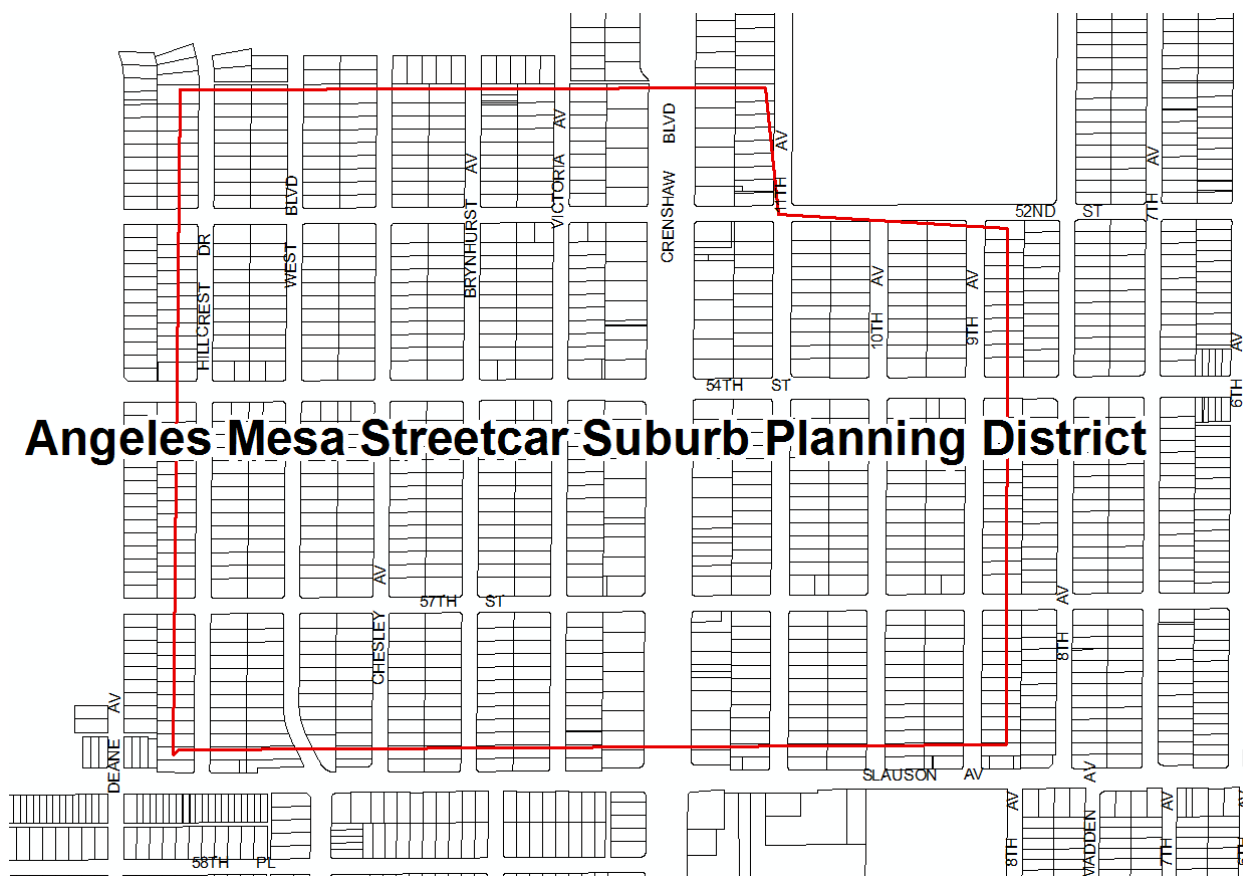

Residential buildings within the planning district range from grand one-and-a-half and two-story houses to modest one-story dwellings. Common architectural styles include American Foursquare, Craftsman, American Colonial Revival, Spanish Colonial Revival, Tudor Revival, and Mediterranean Revival. Commercial properties are mostly vernacular with a handful designed in the Art Deco and Period Revival styles.

Significance:

The Angeles Mesa Streetcar Suburb Planning District is significant for its association with streetcar-era residential and commercial development in the early decades of the 20th century. The streetcar suburb, developed around the Crenshaw Boulevard and 54th Street streetcar lines, reflects the increased pressure for higher density residential development near urban amenities and streetcar connections prior to the widespread availability of the automobile.

The planning district is located in the original Angeles Mesa subdivision, roughly bounded by 52nd Street, Slauson Avenue, Arlington Avenue, and Hillcrest Drive. In 1910, the Angeles Mesa Land Company (the Los Angeles Investment Company) acquired over 400 acres for platting and subdivision. Advertisements in the Los Angeles Times consistently marketed the planning district's wide streets; lots terraced to the street; landscaped, concrete sidewalks; electricity, water, and phone services; and its proximity to streetcar lines.

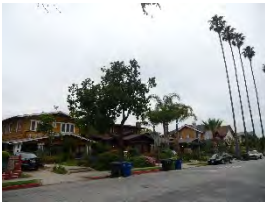

Although the area retains consistency of massing, scale, and architectural vocabulary, the majority of its individual buildings have been altered. Common alterations include stucco over original wall cladding, replacement of original windows, and the removal of features such as window and door surrounds. The cumulative impact of these alterations has compromised the overall integrity of the district. Therefore, it does not appear to be eligible for historic district designation, although it may merit special consideration in the planning process.

| Property sub type: | Neighborhood   |
| Criteria:          | A/1/1  |
| Status code:       | 6LQ  |
| Reason:            | Significant as a 1910s to 1920s streetcar suburb, developed due to its proximity to the 54th and Crenshaw streetcar lines. While the district retains its original planning features, scale and a distinctive sense of place, the majority of buildings within its boundaries have been altered. Thus, the neighborhood does not meet eligibility criteria as a historic district, although it merits special consideration in the planning process. |

Name: Arlington Heights HPOZ Study Area*Description:

The Arlington Heights HPOZ Study Area is located in Central Los Angeles, between Crenshaw Boulevard, Arlington Avenue, Pico Boulevard and the Interstate 10 Freeway. It comprises several thousand buildings, primarily single- and multi-family dwellings, constructed between 1905 and 1940. There are some commercial buildings on the east-west thoroughfares of Pico, Venice and Washington Boulevards and some institutional buildings (primarily religious and educational properties) interspersed throughout.

The study area is characterized by its rectilinear, gridded streets. The topography is generally flat but has slight changes in elevation near the center of the district, perhaps providing the inspiration for the historic name of Arlington “Heights.” Street trees are present but inconsistent; in some places there are regularly spaced palm trees which contribute to a distinctive streetscape. Lot sizes and setbacks are generally consistent throughout, and all streets feature concrete walks and landscaped parkways.

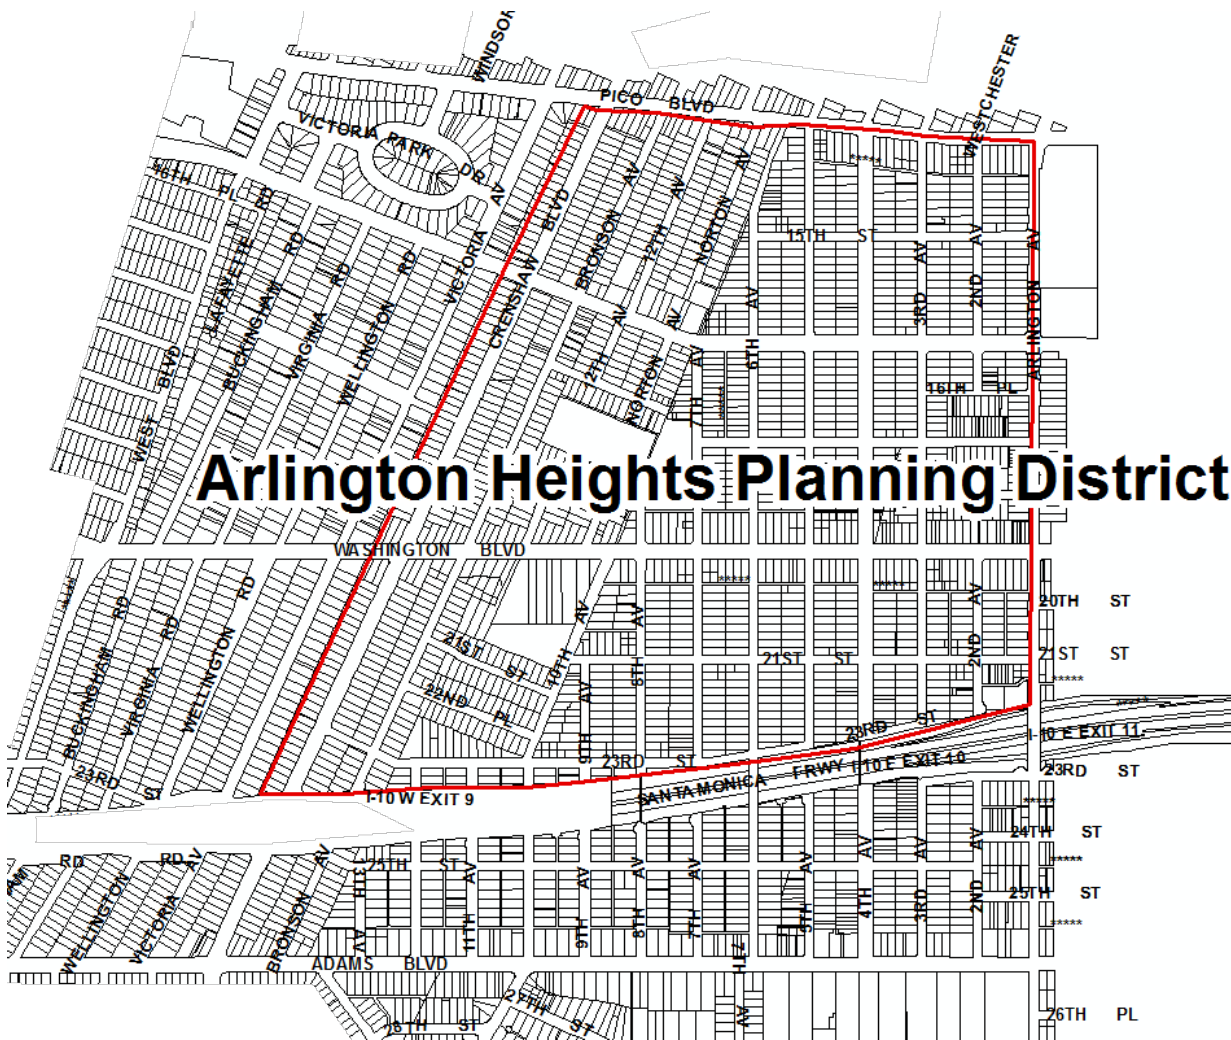

Individual buildings represent a number of styles popular in the first few decades of the 20th century, although the dominant style is Craftsman. Buildings range from modest bungalows to grand houses and from single family houses to duplexes and fourplexes. Common alterations to individual buildings include stucco over original wall surfaces, replaced windows and doors, porch infill, and the removal of decorative elements such as window and door surrounds.

Significance:

This area comprises a study area for a potential Historic Preservation Overlay Zone (HPOZ) and the boundaries were determined through community input. The area is associated with residential development and suburbanization in Central Los Angeles over several decades. Additional analysis and community outreach is needed to finalize boundaries, determine and describe contributing and non-contributing features, and identify relevant historic contexts and associated periods of significance.

There are several smaller areas within the Arlington Heights HPOZ Study Area that have been identified as eligible for historic district designation through SurveyLA. These include:

- Central Arlington Heights Historic District
- Arlington Heights Streetcar Residential Historic District
- Pico Boulevard Streetcar Commercial Historic District
- Bronson Avenue Multi-Family Historic District
- Central Arlington Heights West Historic District
- Central Arlington Heights South Historic District
- 18th Street Residential Historic District
- Chiswick Heights Historic District
- Davidson Villa Historic District
- West Arlington Heights Historic District

Name: Baldwin Hills Elementary School*Description:

Baldwin Hills Elementary School is located at 5421 Rodeo Road in the Baldwin Hills neighborhood of South Los Angeles. The school is sited on a 4.5-acre parcel bounded by Ridgeley Drive, Rodeo Road, and the Baldwin Hills Recreation Center. To the north and south of the school are postwar residential developments of single-family houses and multi-family apartments and garden apartment complexes. The school was established by the LAUSD in 1943; however, the original campus plan was not completed until 1951.

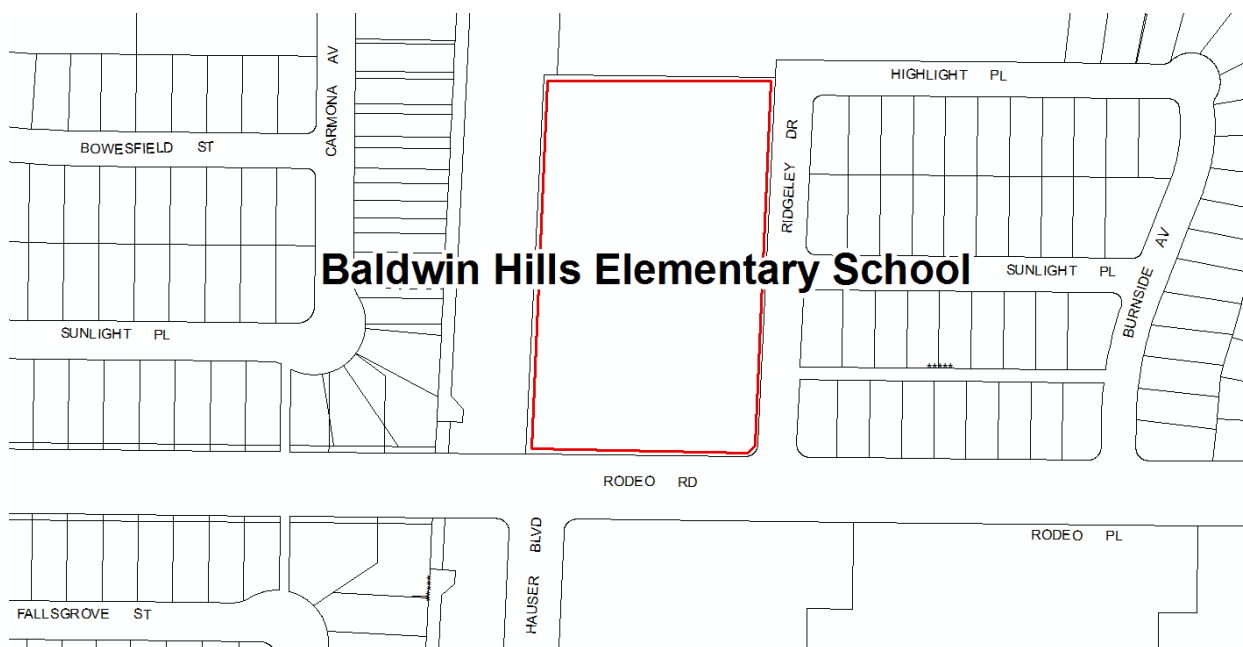

The campus is composed of approximately 21 one-story buildings (numbers are estimated from aerial photographs, as not all buildings are visible from the public right-of-way), roughly 10 of which are original to the campus. The original buildings include one-story classroom buildings, an administration building, and an auditorium. Buildings were designed in the Mid-Century Modern style with low-pitched shed roofs, stucco and stone cladding, covered exterior walkways, and exterior classroom access. The campus retains an indoor-outdoor finger plan, and most outdoor spaces are paved for recreational purposes. Mature trees are located along the perimeter of the original campus buildings. Alterations include the addition of several classroom buildings to the north half of the campus.

Significance:

Baldwin Hills Elementary School is an excellent example of a post-World War II Los Angeles Unified School District (LAUSD) campus. It reflects LAUSD school-planning and design principles of the postwar era and the development of school campuses to accommodate the increase of Los Angeles' student-age population after World War II. The school is also significant as an excellent example of a Mid-Century Modern elementary school designed by noted architect Robert Alexander and landscaping designed by Garrett Eckbo. With its low-pitched shed roofs, horizontal orientation, and lack of applied decoration, the school's original buildings retain the essential character-defining features of the style.

Los Angeles' rapidly growing postwar population prompted the construction of new public school facilities. Voters passed three school bond measures in 1946, 1952 and 1955, to fund the construction of new schools, improvements to existing campuses, and purchase of land for future construction. The construction of Baldwin Hills Elementary was likely funded under the 1946 bond measure. Postwar schools followed contemporary concepts in "building for learning," which emphasized natural light, fresh air, and the use of color. Baldwin Hills Elementary School is exemplary of these design concepts with its primarily single-story buildings, access to outdoor space from every classroom, exterior covered walkways, and extensive outdoor space dedicated to recreation. Although a number of buildings have been added to the elementary school campus, the core of the school is intact, and the school still illustrates major postwar design and planning concepts of the LAUSD. The period of significance for Baldwin Hills Elementary School is 1949 to 1951, reflecting its initial period of construction.

Name: 6621-6625 Crenshaw Blvd Bungalow Court*Description:

The 6621-6625 Crenshaw Blvd Bungalow Court occupies a single rectangular parcel in the Hyde Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. The property was designed in the Spanish Colonial Revival style. The bungalow court comprises seven buildings, including six freestanding, one-story buildings situated around a central courtyard. A two-story building spans the rear of the parcel and contains garages at the first floor. A concrete driveway runs down the center of the courtyard to the garages. The bungalow court retains distinctive features of the property type including modest landscaping, lampposts, and rear detached garages.

Significance:

The 6621-6625 Crenshaw Blvd Bungalow Court is an excellent example of an intact 1930s bungalow court in the Hyde Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. Once a common residential property type in Los Angeles, bungalow courts that remain intact are increasingly rare. Constructed in 1936, this bungalow court is one of few remaining examples in the area that retains its original site plan, landscape and hardscape elements, and architectural features.

Name: 1741-1747 Crenshaw Blvd Courtyard Apartment*Description:

The 1741-1747 Crenshaw Blvd Courtyard Apartment occupies two parcels in the Mid-City area of Los Angeles. The Spanish Colonial Revival-style courtyard apartment comprises two freestanding, two-story buildings situated around a central landscaped courtyard with parking in the rear. Buildings are set back from the street, and apartment units are accessed via a shared concrete walkway. The buildings feature stucco cladding, multi-light wood casement windows, and clay tile coping.

Significance:

The 1741-1747 Crenshaw Blvd Courtyard Apartment is an excellent example of a Spanish Colonial Revival-style courtyard apartment building in the Mid-City area of Los Angeles. Constructed in 1930, the property retains all the essential character-defining features of the Spanish Colonial Revival style as applied to a courtyard apartment.

Name: Crenshaw Village*Description:

Crenshaw Village is located just north of the Baldwin Hills neighborhood in South Los Angeles. The district includes two-story multi-family apartment buildings from Hillcrest Drive to Buckingham Road, between Palmwood Drive and Don Diablo Drive. The topography of the complex has a northerly downward slope, descending from Baldwin Hills. Streets curve slightly but follow a general grid pattern. Long blocks are divided by landscaped walkways and grassy areas between buildings. Lot sizes are fairly consistent, and properties retain uniform setbacks fronted by lawns and concrete sidewalks. Detached garages are located at the rear of the properties and are accessed via alleys.

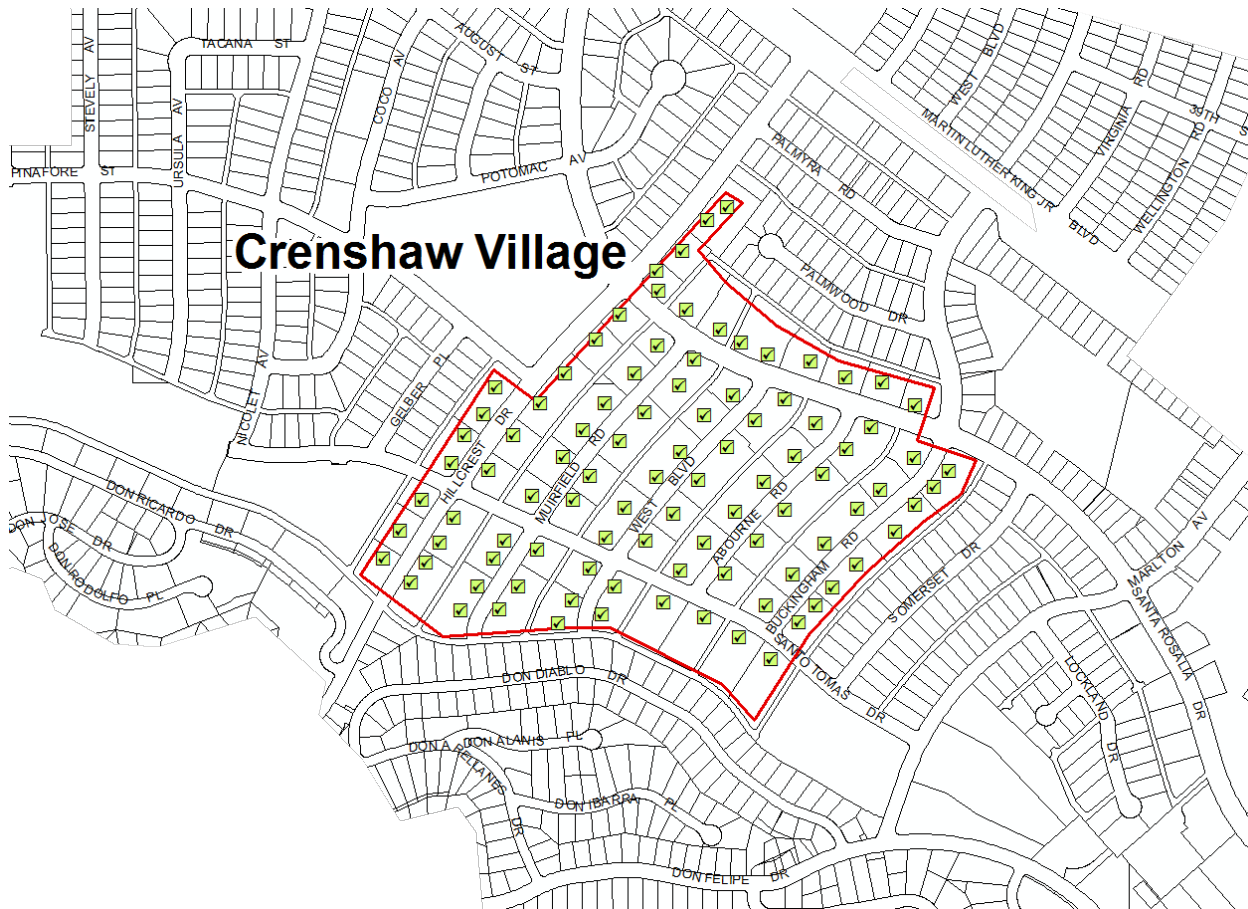

The garden apartment complex consists of eight, twelve, and sixteen-unit apartment houses designed in the Minimal Traditional style. All of the buildings are two stories in height, sheathed in stucco, and covered by low-pitched hipped roofs. Most buildings are L- or U- shaped in plan. Common architectural features include vertical or horizontal string courses, multi-light steel casement windows, and sections of horizontal board siding. Architectural details tend to be concentrated at entryways. Of the 96 total properties, all are contributors to the historic district.

Significance:

Crenshaw Village is significant as an excellent example of a postwar garden apartment complex. The complex retains the essential characteristics of garden apartment housing such as shared courtyards, emphasis on landscape and site plan, and parking restricted to the rear of buildings. Because it adheres to the existing street grid, the complex is a slight variation on the garden apartment property type (which was typically developed on a single superblock). Crenshaw Village is also significant for its association with noted Los Angeles developer Paul Trousdale.

Crenshaw Village was developed between 1947 and 1948 by Paul W. Trousdale and the Crenshaw-La Brea Company on land purchased from the Prudential Life Insurance Company. Advertisements for the development highlighted its “garden type” apartments and its proximity to shopping centers, banks, markets, and theaters. The complex represents a rigorous postwar construction campaign, aimed at eliminating the housing shortage and the massive construction efforts such a large-scale project entailed.

The period of significance has been identified as 1948, which is the year during which the complex’s buildings were constructed. Of the 96 total properties, 100% contribute to the Crenshaw Village’s historic significance.

Name: David Avenue Residential Court*Description:

David Avenue Residential Court is a small cul-de-sac of one-story single-family houses located in the Reynier Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. The residential court is located on the interior of a block entered off of Halm Avenue. It is characterized by its cul-de-sac site planning and very small lot sizes. Shallow front yards of less than three feet separate the primary elevations of each house from the sidewalk, and residences retain narrow driveways leading to small rear garages.

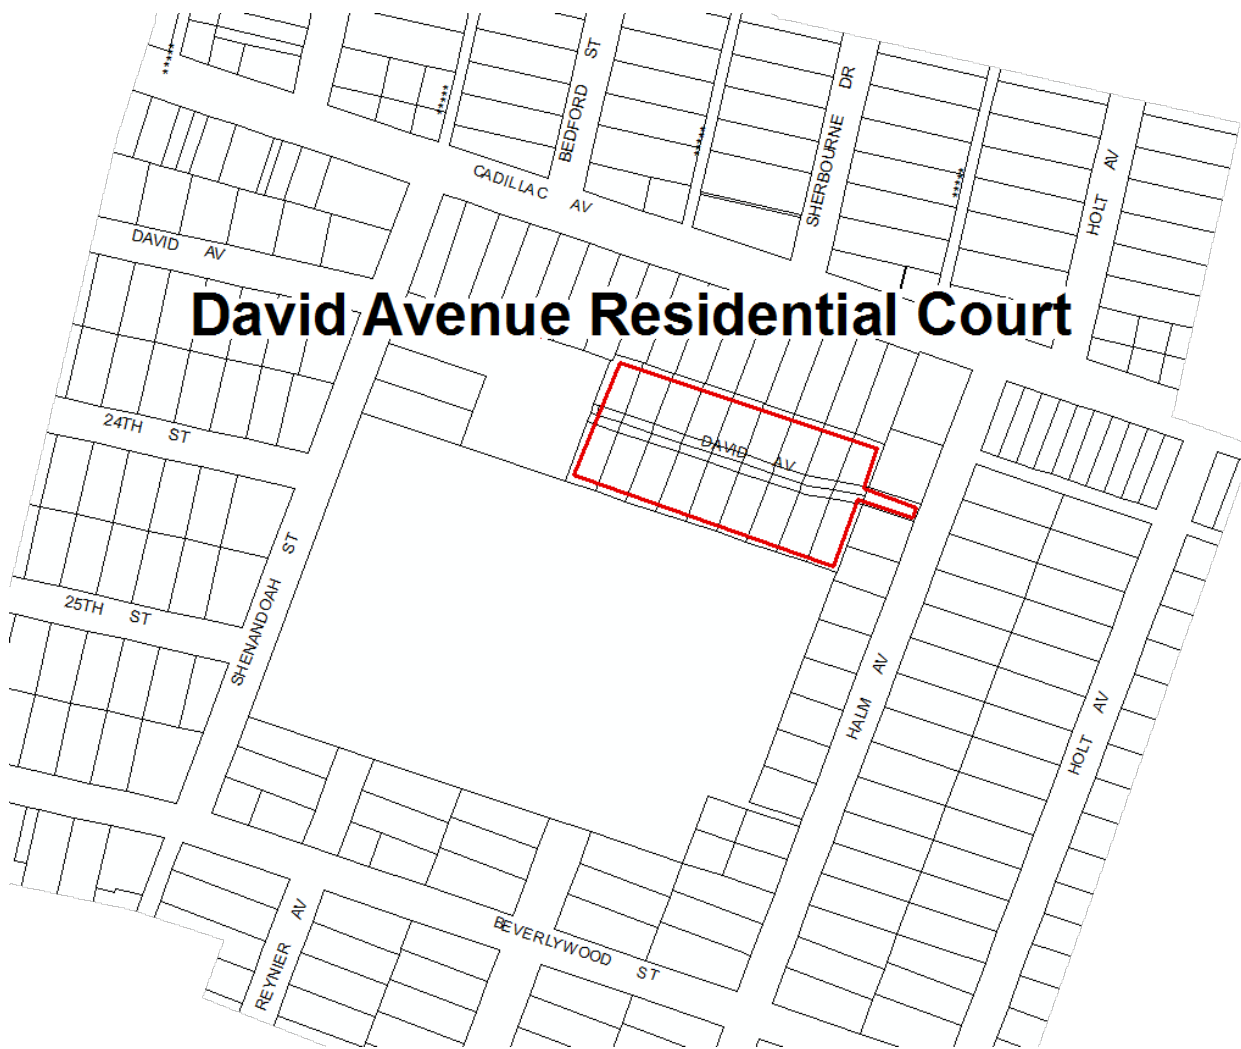

Nearly all 18 houses of David Avenue Residential Court were constructed in 1938 in the Spanish Colonial Revival style (four are in the Minimal Traditional style). Residences are very consistent in massing and scale. All retain stucco cladding and canted bays at their primary elevations, and most have clay tile roofing. One residence at the end of the cul-de-sac on the south side of David has been altered significantly with a second-story addition.

Significance:

David Avenue Residential Court is a rare example of a residential court of modest single-family houses centered around a narrow street. Courts comprised of detached single-family residences are rare in the city. With its site planning, consistency of dwelling sizes and architectural styles, and small, common drive, the subdivision has the appearance and feel of a bungalow court.

David Avenue Residential Court is located on land formerly associated with a historic ranch, in which the adobe residence (La Casa de Rocha, Los Angeles Historic-Cultural Monument No. 13) is still present (directly west of David Avenue). The land the residential court now occupies was subdivided in the late 1930s, with very small lots carved out of an interior block that had been kept intact around La Casa de Rocha. The period of significance for David Avenue Residential Court is 1938, the year during which all its properties were constructed.

Name: Dorset Village*Description:

Dorset Village is located in the Hyde Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. The complex consists of 26 two-story multi-family buildings (196 units) on an eight-acre rectangular parcel bounded by Slauson Avenue, 59th Street, 8th Avenue and commercial properties along Crenshaw Boulevard. The buildings are situated in a radial site plan with integrated landscaping and parking at the periphery. Each building opens onto a landscaped area. All buildings are in the Minimal Traditional style with American Colonial Revival design elements. They feature smooth stucco cladding, low-pitched roofs, and steel casement windows.

Significance:

Dorset Village is an excellent example of a private garden apartment complex from the early 1940s. The complex exhibits the distinguishing features of a garden apartment complex, including the development of the site as a “superblock,” low-scale buildings, shared landscaped courtyards, and separation of automobile and pedestrian traffic.

Dorset Village was designed by William Allen and W. George Lutzi. It was developed by Consolidated Hotels, Inc. and built by Aetna Construction Company. When Dorset Village opened in November 1941, advertisements described the development as “a charming new home with all the conveniences of an apartment for only $40 monthly with garage.” Units featured private front and rear entrances, venetian blinds, refrigerators, carpeted suites and hardwood floors, and large closets. The period of significance has been identified as 1941, which is the year that the complex was constructed.

Name: 2867-2873 Edgehill Dr Bungalow Court

Description:

The 2867-2873 Edgehill Dr Bungalow Court occupies a single narrow parcel in the Jefferson Park area of Los Angeles. The bungalow court comprises four freestanding, one-story buildings situated around a modestly-landscaped central courtyard. Buildings are designed in the Craftsman style with American Colonial Revival features. Each building contains approximately three units. The court retains distinctive features of the property type including a central concrete walkway and lampposts.

Significance:

The 2867-2873 Edgehill Dr Bungalow Court is an excellent example of an intact 1920s bungalow court in the Jefferson Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. Once a common residential property type in Los Angeles, bungalow courts that remain intact are increasingly rare. Constructed in 1923, this bungalow court is one of few remaining examples in the area that retains its original site plan, landscape and hardscape elements, and architectural features.

Name: Gloria Homes Apartments*Description:

Gloria Homes is a 1950s garden apartment complex located in the foothills of the Baldwin Hills neighborhood of South Los Angeles. The complex is bounded by Rodeo Road, Martin Luther King Jr. Boulevard, Coliseum Street, and commercial properties that front on La Brea Avenue. The topography of the site is generally flat. Eight irregularly-shaped parcels grouped into a roughly triangular shape comprise the complex. The property is composed of approximately 35 U- and L-shaped two-story apartment buildings. Buildings were designed in the Minimal Traditional style with Mid-Century Modern elements. They retain features such as wide, geometric porticos leading to central entry halls for individual units, smooth stucco cladding, low-pitched gabled roofs, and minimal applied ornamentation.

Significance:

Gloria Homes Apartments is significant as an excellent example of a garden apartment complex. It exhibits the distinguishing features of a garden apartment development, including low-scale buildings oriented to face landscaped areas and a minimal network of streets that relegate the automobile to the rear or edge of the site. Gloria Homes was designed by architect Maurice M. Fleishman and developed by RRR, Inc. It was part of the rapid development of apartment complexes in the Baldwin Hills area of Los Angeles in the postwar era. The period of significance for Gloria Homes is 1951 to 1964, reflecting the complex's period of construction.

Name: Jack Stephan Plumbing and Heating Signs*Description:

Two large commercial signs on two detached (neighboring) buildings. The sign on 7520 S. Crenshaw is a blade sign reading "Stephan," while the sign on 7516 S. Crenshaw is a roof-mounted sign that reads "Plumbing." The signs feature neon tubing and faucets with dripping water that is illustrated with blinking lights.

Significance:

Significant example of historic commercial signs, dating to the late 1940s. The two signs, which are located on two different buildings, work together to advertise the location of Stephan Plumbing. This evaluation pertains to the signs only; the buildings do not satisfy eligibility criteria.

Context 1:

Evaluation pertains to the signs only; the buildings do not satisfy eligibility criteria. The signs appear to meet local criteria only and may not meet significance thresholds for National Register or California Register eligibility. |

Name: 3805-3811 Mont Clair St Bungalow Court*Description:

The 3805-3811 Mont Clair St Bungalow Court occupies a single rectangular parcel in the Jefferson Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. The bungalow court comprises four freestanding, one-story buildings and a single two-story building situated around a central courtyard. Buildings are designed in the Spanish Colonial Revival style. The court retains distinctive features of the property type including central landscaping and a shared concrete walkway.

Significance:

The 3805-3811 Mont Clair St Bungalow Court is an excellent example of a 1920s bungalow court in the Jefferson Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. Once a common residential property type in Los Angeles, bungalow courts that remain intact are increasingly rare. Constructed in 1924, this bungalow court is one of few remaining examples in the area that retains its original site plan, landscape and hardscape elements, and architectural features.

Name: 3813-3815 Mont Clair St Bungalow Court*Description:

The 3813-3815 Mont Clair St Bungalow Court occupies a single rectangular parcel in the Jefferson Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. The bungalow court comprises four freestanding, single-story buildings situated around a central courtyard and designed in the Spanish Colonial Revival style. At the rear of the court is a single two-story building, also in the Spanish Colonial Revival style. The court retains distinctive features of the property type including central landscaping and a shared concrete walkway.

Significance:

The 3813-3815 Mont Clair St Bungalow Court is an excellent example of an intact 1920s bungalow court in Jefferson Park neighborhood of Los Angeles. Once a common residential property type in Los Angeles, bungalow courts that remain intact are increasingly rare. Constructed in 1924, this bungalow court is one of few remaining examples in the area that retains its original site plan, landscape and hardscape elements, and architectural features. Due to window alterations, the bungalow court may not retain sufficient integrity for National Register eligibility.

Name: Saturn Street Fourplex Court*Description:

The Saturn Street Fourplex Court is a complex of ten fourplex apartment buildings in the Mid-City neighborhood of Los Angeles. It is located on a long, narrow parcel at the interior of a block between West Boulevard and Buckingham Road, just north of Washington Boulevard. The fourplexes are situated around a central driveway and courtyard with lawn, mature trees, and concrete walkways leading to each building. The parcel itself has minimal street frontage; one building fronts west onto West Boulevard and the rest of the buildings extend north into the interior block. A vehicular driveway is entered off of West Boulevard and leads to a central parking area.

The buildings that comprise the Saturn Street Fourplex Court are nearly identical, two-story fourplexes constructed in the Spanish Colonial Revival style. The buildings are generally symmetrical and rectangular in shape with a central entrance under a small covered porch. All buildings have flat roofs and are finished with stucco. Due to its location at the interior of the block, the complex is generally not visible from the public right-of-way.

Significance:

The Saturn Street Fourplex Court is a rare example of a cluster of fourplexes situated around a common courtyard. This combination of the fourplex property type and bungalow court site planning is unusual; few examples of this type exist in the city. The period of significance for the Saturn Street Fourplex Court is 1925, reflecting its period of construction.

Name: West Boulevard Heights Planning District*Description:

The West Boulevard Heights Planning District is located in the Hyde Park neighborhood of South Los Angeles. The planning district is composed of roughly 135 properties bounded by 60th Street, 64th Street, Long Street and the alley behind commercial properties on West Boulevard. It is principally composed of single-family residences dating between 1931 and 1937. The topography of the district is flat. The district is further distinguished by its rectilinear, gridded street pattern and a relative absence of street trees. Houses feature consistent setbacks and are fronted by broad lawns, concrete sidewalks, and grassy parkways. Nearly all buildings have concrete driveways with curb cuts leading to rear, detached single-car garages. Common alterations to individual buildings include window and door replacements, textured stucco over original wall surfaces, and some second-story additions.

Significance:

The West Boulevard Heights Planning District is significant for its concentration of Spanish Colonial Revival single-family residences in South Los Angeles. The planning district was subdivided and developed by prolific builder William T. Richardson of the Western Building Company. Of his homes in West Boulevard Heights, Richardson stated that “livability, first, is the principal of the new house,” explaining that “the floorplan is the star feature of the design, and the house is designed around it.”

Although buildings within the district maintain consistency of massing, scale, and architectural vocabulary, the majority of its individual buildings have been altered. Common alterations include stucco over original wall cladding, replacement of original windows, and some second-story additions. The cumulative impact of these alterations, both to individual buildings and to the district as a whole, has compromised the overall integrity of the district. Therefore, it does not appear to be eligible for historic district designation, although it may merit special consideration in the planning process.

| Reason:            | Significant as a 1930s Period Revival neighborhood, primarily composed of Spanish Colonial Revival single-family residences. While the district retains its original planning features, scale and a distinctive sense of place, the majority of buildings within its boundaries have been altered. Thus, the neighborhood does not meet eligibility criteria as a historic district, although it merits special consideration in the planning process. |
